TUSCANIA SURVIVORS REUNITED ABROAD

THE American Lumberman of June 15, published the following interesting story:

"When the ill fated Tuscania sailed from the American shore early last February it had on board 800 lads recruited from the woods, sawmills and lumber yards of the country as well as several hundred soldier boys. Most of the boys were fortunate enough to be among the saved, following the 'U' boat attack off the eastern coast of Ireland, and were landed after hours of suffering and mental torture at different points in the Emerald Isle and Scotland. The forestry lads who survived the southern, in responsible positions, one by one congregated at Morning Hill Camp near Winchester, England.

"Before they departed for France the boys had a group photo taken; an enlargement of it was received this week at the offices of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, in Kansas City. It will be recalled that 164 of the Tuscania dead, many of whom were forestry lads, now lie buried near Port Ellen, Islay Island, one of the Hebrides group, but all the Long-Bell boys were among the saved and each one is now doing his 'bit' in France.

"Each one of the Long-Bell boys who are identified in

Tuscania disaster remained for several weeks at army camps in England before they proceeded to France, and it might be described as one of the pranks of fate that the nine young men who previous to enlisting in the Sixth Battalion of the 20th Engineers (Forest) were employees of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, in responsible positions, one by one congregated at Morning Hill Camp near Winchester, England. Before they departed for France the boys had a group photo taken; an enlargement of it was received this week at the offices of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, in Kansas City. It will be recalled that 164 of the Tuscania dead, many of whom were forestry lads, now lie buried near Port Ellen, Islay Island, one of the Hebrides group, but all the Long-Bell boys were among the saved and each one is now doing his 'bit' in France.

"Since landing safely following the Tuscania disaster the Long-Bell boys, like the hundreds of other lumber industry lads who belong to the 20th Engineers, have written home to their relatives and families. These letters have been interesting and descriptive of their experiences, treatment accorded them in Allied countries and matters having to do with their work in France, where they are employed in French forests, doing woods work in their own way, which is a la American, or at sawmills now having American machinery and operated along the same lines as sawmills in the United States. Herein, as in many army methods, American brains and American pep are exemplified in the lumber industry lads from the States who have revolutionized lumber production in the territories back of the fighting zones. There are many things that the Long-Bell Lumber Company organization is proud of, but of none more than that nine of its former employees are serving for the Allied cause in a way that their experience best fits them, and using their brains and brawn in the task engaged in by hundreds of American lads, of getting out lumber and timber supplies needed by the Allied armies. In modern warfare lumber is just as necessary as guns or munitions or food supplies, and armies to wage war successfully must have their supplies quickly and in quantities.

"The nine boys here shown report themselves as hale and hearty and most enthusiastic in the work that now engages them in France."

Three Perish in Crashes Of Autos in N. California

Three persons, one of them a 14-year-old girl, were killed in automobile accidents in Northern California during the past 24 hours. In addition, a Salinas truck driver was charged with manslaughter as the result of the death of a 20-year-old Salinas high school boy near that city last Sunday. The dead:

W. E. Barwick, 35, lumber salesman, of 260 California Street, San Francisco.

George Le Delt, 45, 501 North Sixteenth Street, San Jose.

Mary Jane Hampson, 14, of Loyalton, near Truckee.

Barwick was killed on the Monterey highway three miles south of San Jose when his automobile, traveling at terrific speed, crashed head-on into a truck laden with wine. Barwick's car was reduced to junk in the collision.

SANTA CLAUS CLOSES OUT

DISPOSES OF REMAINING STOCK TO CHICAGO CHILDREN.

Meets Offspring of Members of Ashland and Menoken Clubs in Afternoon, Does Some Punch and Judy and Other Stunts, and Disposes of the Christmas Gifts Left on His Hands After Regular Distribution on Monday.

Punch and Judy shows, trained dogs, and other delights vied with each other yesterday in entertaining the children at several of the clubs in the city. Owing to the fact that Christmas came on Monday this year most of the Christmas parties are belated, and the youngsters are rejoicing at the prolongation of their fun.

Immediately after luncheon 250 small boys and girls assembled at the Ashland club, where they were received by Mrs. T. R. Brown, president of the ladies' auxiliary, and Mrs. V. R. Day, who had charge of the afternoon's entertainment.

The ice was broken by Prof. McCormick and his troupe of trained dogs, who gave an exhibition in the auditorium, and by a particularly genial Santa Claus, who later proved to be Dr. A. J. Nichols. After every one had become acquainted luncheon was announced, and this was followed by a cotillon, which Santa Claus led, and in which every one joined.

CHICAGOANS REPORTED ABOARD TUSCANIA

From the War Department and from Other Sources the Following List of Chicago Men Supposed to Have Been on the Ill-Fated Transport Is Compiled. There Is No Information at Hand to Show That Any of These Boys Was Lost.

Of the many who received no word there were the families of the following, whose names were published in THE TRIBUNE of Friday: William E. Barwick, 3334 Fulton street; Hubert B. Bartholf, Glencoe; August Carlson, 4942 Blackhawk street; Capt. Ralph A. Feldes, 1636 West One Hundred and Second street; Joseph Gail, 454½ West Twelfth street; Fred Grohn, 6630 South Morgan street; Alexander Gronquist, 9900 Avenue H; Kenneth Krippeme, brother-in-law of John O'Connell, 2224 Clifton avenue; Bugler Archibald R. McNulty, 1807 Lunt avenue; Joseph Lindstrom, 609 North Homan avenue; Capt. C. V. Smith, 4747 Kenwood avenue.

"Chicago Tribune" Saturday 9 Feb 1918 p 3

For many fathers and mothers and wives and sweethearts sleep came last night for the first time in four days. This was especially true of those whose loved ones' names did not appear in the first list of 1,000 survivors sent out from Washington Saturday. Among these were the wives of First Lieut. Charles L. Samson of 6730 Perry avenue and William E. Barwick of 3334 Fulton street.

Telegrams Arrive.

Dawn yesterday found them still waiting. It was well toward sunset when each received a telegram:

"Washington, D. C.—Officially reported that ——— was saved from Tuscania.

"McCain, Adj. Gen."

There were hundreds of telegrams like that delivered yesterday.

William E. Barwick cabled his family as follows:

THE LATEST NEWS CONCERNING THE SINKING OF THE "TUSCANIA" AND THE PROBABLE SURVIVORS THEREON.

We have received, within an hour of going to press with this edition of the LUMBER WORLD REVIEW, on Friday, February 8, a telegram of considerable length from Lynn M. Lamm, in charge of the Washington Bureau of the LUMBER WORLD REVIEW, District National Bank building, Washington, D. C., which telegram gives the most authoritative news which we will likely receive for several days concerning the personnel of the officers and the names of those who sailed upon the ill-fated transport:

Washington, D. C., February 8.—[SPECIAL TELEGRAM.]—Nothing has been heard from Dewitt S. Schwartz, of St. Louis. This means nothing, because the War Department has nothing definite on individuals. He sailed on the Tuscania, as the records show.

At this time it looks as though very few members of the Sixth Battalion lost their lives when the Tuscania was torpedoed. Official reports to the war department state that less than 100 soldiers were lost. Of this number many were detached, as evidenced by the fact that bodies are being washed ashore with identification tags, but no units shown. This could not be the case with the lumbermen, because all had been attached to some units before sailing. In addition to the men drowned or killed when the Tuscania was torpedoed, it is now reported that more than 100 men are in hospitals. The reports show nothing as to the seriousness of their cases.

Officials of the War Department state that the only way they will be able to learn the men actually lost will be to make a complete list of those saved and compare that with those known to have sailed on the transport. This is necessary, because many of the dead cannot be identified.

It is estimated that several days will elapse anyhow before any authoritative list can be completed.

Major Benjamin F. Wade was the commanding officer of the Sixth Battalion when the Tuscania sailed for Europe. Other officers known to have sailed, taken from the official list of the War Department, follows:

Company D—Captain D. D. Hall, First Lieutenant L. S. Saunders, First Lieutenant Milton Pittman, Second Lieutenant H. C. Walcott and Second Lieutenant C. R. Beal.

Company E—Captain J. Edward Gilouly, First Lieutenant Chas. A. Schweisinger, Jr., First Lieutenant Benton L. Yost, Second Lieutenant Warren Richard and Second Lieutenant Jorden Richard.

Company F—Captain Charles E. Hetrick, First Lieutenant Arthur L. Chamberlain, First Lieutenant, William C. Buhmann, Second Lieutenant Frank Mizell, and Second Lieutenant Daniel W. Parker.

A number of the above named officers have already been reported saved, but definite information at this time is lacking at the War Department.

[Seth E. Barwick, Chicago representative of the Long-Bell Lumber Co., of Kansas City, whose son, William E. Barwick, is with Company F, Sixth Battalion, Twentieth Engineers (Forest) and sailed on the Tuscania, told the Lumber World Review late on Friday that he had up to that hour had no word from the young man.—EDITOR.]

FROM TWO TUSCANIA SURVIVORS.

Letters from Americans who have joined the overseas forces are always of interest, but a letter from a lumberman who was on the ill-fated Tuscania and who escaped unscathed cannot but be of surpassing interest, to not only his immediate friends, but to members of the trade generally. Will Barwick, son of Seth E. Barwick, of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, Lumber Exchange, Chicago, was not heard from for several days after the disaster occurred and much anxiety was felt by not only his parents, but by many of his warm friends in the trade as to his fate. However, on the third day after the sinking a cablegram got through announcing that he was safe. As soon as Mr. Barwick was able to find writing facilities he advised his parents from England as follows:

"I hope you received my cable in time to keep you from worrying greatly. I know that you must have known that I was somewhere on the ocean when the accident occurred, and, of course, could imagine the worst in an instance of this sort. I tried my best to cable you at an earlier date, but it was impossible owing to the fact that the telegraph authorities seemed to be under the impression that it would not be permissible, and it took two or three days to get it straightened out. I can imagine the excitement and anxiety of those who had reason to suppose their relatives or friends might be on board, and feel sorry that they had occasion to worry about us.

"Slighting all descriptions of the accident, I will say that I only suffered two losses, my tobacco, of which I had a good supply, and my fountain pen. I am now located in England with the balance of the boys and we are being treated just fine—a very comfortable bed and quarters and the food is very good.

"I have had the opportunity of seeing a great deal of the country here, and had it not been for the accident and the knowledge that some of our friends were lost on the boat, it would have been enjoyable beyond words; but under the circumstances we could not take a great deal of pleasure out of our trip across the country to our present quarters. The spirits of the boys are reviving rapidly now, however, and as the government was kind enough to advance them some money yesterday, they are nearly in a jubilant state.

"There were four of us boys working in the office together before we left the states, and we lost one of the very finest when the accident occurred. He was living and working with us every day and we got to know him very well, so we feel his loss most keenly.

"I cannot speak highly enough of our treatment by the Red Cross and the English people since the accident occurred, for they have evidently given up everything to our comfort and convenience, and I am very glad and proud of the fact that mother is doing so much to help that organization. Any scandal monger or pro-German who questions the good work, or where the money goes to, of either the Red Cross or the Y. M. C. A., does not know of what they speak and deserves a severe reprimand. The Red Cross is unquestionably for the soldiers' welfare and the Y. M. C. A. is everything outside of his routine of camp life.

"We have often questioned the motives of our American people who are always running off to England to travel, but from what I have seen of rural conditions we can hardly blame them so long as they remain loyal Americans. Some of the old pictures I have seen and travel talks that I have heard of England I have now had a chance to see in real life, and if I were now in civilian life and could putter in and around some of these quaint old places, it would be a most enjoyable experience to me, but under the circumstances I cannot find so much enjoyment in it outside of the educational feature.

"Lumber World Review" 25 Mar 1918 p 47

Letter written from England, hoping his family had received his cable in time to keep from worrying greatly. The telegram authorities said it was not permissible to contact home, so he had to work for 2 to 3 days to get a cable sent. He suffered two losses: his tobacco (now with a good supply) & his fountain pen. He is in England now with most of the boys, and they are treated fine, have comfortable beds & quarters & good food. He has seen some of the country & it has been enjoyable except for the accident (the Tuscania) & the loss of some friends. The spirits are reviving among the boys, particularly after the government advanced them money yesterday. Four boys in his office were always together, and they have lost one of their finest, who was living & working with them daily. The Red Cross & English people have provided much, and feels proud that his mother is working for the Red Cross. Anyone who questions the Red Cross or YMCA doesn't know what he's talking about. People have always wondered why travelers visit England, and if a civilian he would find it most enjoyable.

Wife:

Edna H. Barwick, 99, of 1209 21st Ave., Rock Island, died Saturday, Aug. 21, 1993, at Silver Cross Nursing Center, Rock Island. Memorial services are 1 p.m. Tuesday at Wheelan Funeral Home, Rock Island. The body was cremated. Entombment is in Oakdale Memorial Gardens Mausoleum, Davenport. Memorials may be made to Friendship Manor, Rock Island, Intouch Of Lutheran Social Service of Illinois, or First United Methodist Church, Rock Island.

The former Edna H. Howarth was born Sept. 4, 1893, in Chilton, Wis., the daughter of Joseph and Abigail Castona Howarth. She married William E. Barwick in 1921, in Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. Barwick attended Oshkosh State Teachers College and was graduated from San Francisco State Teachers College. She received her masters of arts degree from the University of Iowa.

She began teaching in Rock Island in 1929, previously teaching in Stockbridge, Wis., Oak Park, Ill., San Antonio, Texas, and Seattle, Wash. Her first position in Rock Island was at the old Horace Mann School on 14th Avenue and 36th and 37th Streets. The next year she was transferred to Denkmann, which was then a new school.

In 1935 she became principal of Hawthorne, teaching there half days until the second semester when she was named principal of Irving as well. From 1936 to 1943 she served both Irving and Grant schools. In later years she was appointed to Audubon and divided her time with Grant school until 1946, and then with Denkmann until 1952. She continued to be at Audubon until her retirement in May of 1964.

She was past president and a charter member of Mu Chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma and was affiliated with Chapter BK, PEO Sisterhood and Amelia Trenkenschuh Branch, Association for Childhood Education. She was a board member and former vice president of Rock Island/Moline Branch American Association of University Women and belonged to two of its study groups, Reviewers and International Relations and was a former member of Jane Delano Circle of Kings Daughters. She enjoyed reading, playing cards and gardening.

Survivors include a daughter-in-law, Bette G. Barwick, Rock Island; a grandson, William E. Barwick, Phoenix, Ariz., two stepgrandsons, Terry Tellefson, Rock Island, and Dean Tellefson, Aurora, Colo.; 3 stepgreat-grandchildren; a sister, Esther Howarth, Rockford, Ill.; and a nephew. A son, William E. Barwick died July 4.

BOY FALLS 22 FEET FROM TREE PLATFORM

William E. Barwick, 8-year-old son of Mrs. Ednah Barwick, 1813 Thirtieth street, Rock Island, who teaches in Denkmann school, incurred fractures of both bones in his right forearm and dislocation of his right elbow when he fell from a platform twenty-two feet to the ground in a woods near Eighteenth avenue and 29½ street Saturday.

A group of older boys had built the platform in the trees and the youngster thought he would play on it when the older boys were not around. He lost his balance and fell to the ground.

"Moline (IL) Dispatch" Monday 16 May 1932 p 12

Imitating Tarzan of Apes Leads to Accident, and Boy, 8, Is Badly Hurt

"Billy" Barwick Injured in 22-Foot Fall From a Platform.

Playing Tarzan of the Apes is a swell sport so long as a fellow can do just as Tarzan of the movies does in getting about, nimbly and surely, between the trees. But when a body loses his balance and falls 22 feet—that's different.

William E. "Billy" Barwick, 8 years old, son of Mrs. Edna H. Barwick, 1812 Thirtieth street, a teacher at Denkmann public school, Rock Island, can testify today to the truth of the allegation. Incidentally, he is through with the tricks of Tarzan.

"Billy" incurred fractures of both bones in the right forearm and a comminuted dislocation of the right elbow Saturday when he toppled from a platform said to have been erected by older boys in a large tree at Eighteenth avenue and Twenty-ninth-and-a-half street.

Inspired by the recent screen talking version of Edgar Rice Burroughs' immortal character of fiction, the boys of the neighborhood had been playing at Tarzan the last week or two, the more agile mounting to the platform and then climbing out on sturdy tree limbs until able to swing down to the ground.

The smaller boys were pretending at another angle of Tarzan's activities—that of throwing a knife at wild and ferocious animals sneaking and slinking through the wilds—when "Billy" was injured.

Lost Balance.

He lost his balance on the platform to which he had climbed by a makeshift ladder, and fell the entire 22 feet. And lighting on the ground where the boys were playing was somewhat different from a fall in the vegetation-covered forests where the Tarzan of fiction roamed.

The accident threw cold water on further emulation of the athletic man-of-the-woods, particularly when word of it reached the mothers of the lads who had been playing at the makebelieve sport.

"Billy" was taken to St. Anthony's hospital and attended by Dr. E. F. Condon. "His condition is improved," was the report from the physician this afternoon.

FORMER RESIDENT IS DEAD IN OAKLAND

W. D. Barwick Passes Away In That City at Advanced Age—Funeral Friday.

W. D. Barwick, a former resident of this city, later removing to Lerna, where he lived for many years, died this morning at his home in Oakland. He was 75 years old. The funeral services will be held in Oakland on Friday.

The deceased was an old soldier, having served a number of years in the civil war, a portion of which time he spent as an inmate of the Libby prison. He is survived by his wife and by one son—Seth Barwick, who lives in Chicago.
