Life:

News Sounds Good to Father.
A. J. Uphus, father of Ralph Uphus, was overjoyed last night when informed by The Ledger that his son was among the survivors.
"Well, that sounds pretty good to me," he said. "We were positive Ralph was on the Tuscania. We received a card from him a few days ago saying he was about to sail for France. He only enlisted in December in Seattle and certainly got started cross in a hurry.
"Ralph is a Washington boy, born in Everett. He is only 22, but he was superintendent of the A. N. U. mill here and making good as a lumberman. That's why he enlisted in the forestry unit."

"Tacoma (WA) Daily Ledger" Friday 8 Feb 1918 p 1

RALPH UPHUS SAFE,
FIRST OF TUSCANIA
SURVIVORS REPORTED

Word was received last night that Ralph Uphus has been saved from the Tuscania. He was the first survivor reported.

Ralph Uphus is a Washington boy, born at Everett. His father is now at Enumclaw. Ralph was superintendent of the A. N. U. mill at Enumclaw and was making good as a lumberman when he enlisted in the forestry regiment.

"Tacoma (WA) News Tribune" Friday 8 Feb 1918 p 16

Ralph Uphus of Enumclaw was the first Washington survivor reported. George Johnson of Sumner, brother-in-law of Hy L. Schoonover of Sumner, said last night he had no word of Schoonover's fate. Information also was lacking concerning Gothard W. Navier, son of Rev. Navier of Parkland, and Perry Howard of Puyallup.

Shirley Uphus Married At St. Patrick's

Miss Shirley Rae Uphus and David Charles McHugh, who were united in marriage at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, are on their way to Mexico City and points of interest in the Caribbean where they will spend two weeks before returning to Tacoma to make their home at 412 No. 4th St.

The Rev. E. J. McFadden read the marriage services for the daughter of Mrs. Florence Uphus of Tacoma and Ralph Uphus of Seattle, and the son of Mrs. Walter Gliden of Jacumba, Calif., and Walter S. McHugh of Gig Harbor.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of imported Belgium lace over tulle and silk taffeta. Dainty cap sleeves framed the V-neckline and a fitted bodice was fashioned to a very bouffant skirt featuring tier upon tier of lace petals which extended into a brush train. An imported French illusion fingertip-length veil was caught to a queen's crown of seed pearls.

Mrs. John Bruno of Seattle, matron of honor, and Miss JoAnn Uphus, sister of the bride, attendant, were identically attired in emerald green satin short gowns and matching pearl studded tiaras. Each carried a white velvet muff attached with a green chrysanthemum.

Walter D. McHugh, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Lloyd Costello, Ralph Uphus and John Bruno ushered. Mrs. Jack Bird provided the wedding music.

The mother of the bride was attired in a blue faille suit with matching hat. The bridegroom's mother wore a blue and beige costume suit with matching accessories. Each complimented their outfits with white orchid corsages.

The Tacoma Lawn and Tennis Club was the scene of the reception following the ceremonies.

Assisting with festive duties were Mesdames Ralph Uphus, John McHugh, Walter D. McHugh, Robert Ingham, George O'Brien and Bernard Chillquist.

The bride is a graduate of Aquinas Academy and attended Seattle University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Bellarmine High School and Gonzaga University.

The couple will make their home in Tacoma where the bridegroom is a construction contractor.

 Recommend 0 Recommend David's obituary to your friends.

David Charles McHugh, beloved husband of Shirley Rae McHugh, passed away at St. Joseph's hospital on October 8, 2020 at age 86.

Born May 16, 1934 in Tacoma, WA he was the son of Elida Depew Glidden and Walter Stanley McHugh. Dave attended St. Patrick's Grade School, Fox Island Grade School, and graduated from Bellarmine Preparatory high school in 1951. While living in Tacoma, they lived on South 'J' Street where Dave and his siblings enjoyed Wright Park as their backyard. Here, Dave also had fond memories of his mother running a boarding house where the early seeds of hospitality and generosity were planted in young Dave. In 1943, their father, Walter, purchased property on Fox Island, the old Dreazy Farm, and the family moved from Tacoma. The four McHugh kids helped maintain the farm and also built the tennis court and pool that family and friends enjoyed for decades to come. At the time, the Fox Island Bridge had not been built, so they would catch a ride or walk to the other side of the island to take the ferry to Tacoma for high school. After high school, Dave followed his siblings to Gonzaga University graduating with a Bachelor of Science in Chemistry in 1955. At Gonzaga, he participated in ROTC and after school spent time serving in the US Army as a radio operator.

As fate would have it, Dave was introduced to the beautiful Shirley Rae Uphus at a Kennedy election party held by their mutual friends in Seattle, and in December of 1963 they married at St. Patrick's Church. Dave worked as an independent contractor specializing in steel erection and also in the family business; Cooney-McHugh Construction. Projects include multiple bridges in Montana, Alaska, Idaho, Oregon and Washington. Dave and Shirley raised their family in Old Town Tacoma, close to St. Patrick school and church where he dedicated much of his talent and skill to the community. He continued his service at Bellarmine Prep participating in many fundraising events and as Booster Club President. Dave was in his element putting on fun events and supporting the school. During this time, Shirley and Dave owned and operated another family business, Westgate Nutrition Center, with a satellite store at the B&I. After retiring, Dave and Shirley moved from Tacoma out to Fox Island where they opened their home up to everyone for weddings, funerals, potlucks, anniversaries, birthdays, 4th of July parties, winemaking parties, Tacoma Rugby events and Girl Scout events. Everyone was offered one of his bean dish creations, a drink and a few chores to work on. The more the merrier.

Dave is survived by his three loving children, Maureen Ann McHugh, Megan McHugh Boly and her husband Jeff, and Ryan Evan McHugh all of Tacoma, WA; siblings Walter "Buster" McHugh and Colleen Koval; grandchildren Alex and husband Adam, Deven, Sam and Emma Ropes, Bridget and Quinn Boly; and countless loving nieces and nephews from the McHugh, Costello, Signs, Paske, Uphus and Davies families. He was preceded in death by his parents, Walter and Elida, his sister Marjorie Paske, and brothers William Signs and John McHugh.

A Funeral Mass and blessing will be held at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Tacoma, WA. A Burial Ceremony will be held at the Fox Island Cemetery on Saturday, October 17, 2020.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made in Dave's memory to the Tacoma Rugby Club tacomarugby.com or Fox Island Historical Museum foxislandmuseum.org

Father:

Q: When I bought my first home, I found an in-the-wall table made by the Clearwater Lumber Co., obviously in Florida. It folded out to become two benches and a tabletop. The table was removed, and I have it. Can you tell me anything about it?

—Walt, Smithfield, Va.

A: Ah yes. The old table (or bed) in the wall trick. Vaudeville comedians and TV sit-coms have gotten a lot of mileage out of a similar device, the Murphy bed. Around the turn of the last century when efficiency was a new-fangled idea, built-ins were more common than they are today.

The Clearwater Lumber Co. was in Idaho and their timberland was absorbed into the Potlach Lumber giant in 1903. Inventor Anton J. Uphus filed for a patent on his folding table in January 1922 and was granted No. 1524415 in January 1925. That dates the table to sometime between then and when you saw it in the house. As for info, I assume you mean value. Value comes from demand, and as far as I know, demand is minimal. Very minimal.

If I wanted to sell the table, I'd post it online, tell the history, set a price I could live with and see what happens.

FYI: To view the original patent, search online or at a library where patent documents are retrievable.

Reed Rihardt received a message Friday, stating that his cousin Mrs. Josph Uphus had passed away at her home in Seattle, Wash. No particulars were given. The news came as a great shock to the Ulysses friends as Mrs. Uphus was formerly Miss Rada McCarty of Ulysses and lived here until her marriage to Mr. Uphus, a prominent lumberman of Seattle many years ago. Published: 01 October 2014

David was born on January 3, 1933, in Seattle, Washington, to Evan Uphus and Polly Emery. He was originally named Reed Uphus, but after his parents' divorce, his mother married Joseph Wolfe, and Reed was formally adopted and renamed David Emery Wolfe. He was an avid skier in his youth. He attended the University of Washington before serving as a hospital corpsman in the US Navy during the Korean War, although he never saw combat. After this, he matriculated at Columbia College, New York, beginning what was to be a lifelong passion for living in that city. His academic career was nothing short of brilliant; he graduated Phi Beta Kappa Summa Cum Laude in Philosophy with the class of 1956. He then studied medicine at Columbia Physicians & Surgeons where he was elected to Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society in his junior year. He received an MD in 1960. That same year, he married Shelagh Foreman.

Instead of taking clinical training after medical school, he was appointed as a postdoctoral fellow at the Laboratory of Neuroanatomical Sciences of what was then National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness of the National Institutes of Health. David was interested in the newly emerging field of electron microscopy and began to apply this technology to issues in neuroscience. In 1962, working with Julius Axelrod, he was first author on an article in Science entitled, "Localizing tritiated norepinephrine in sympathetic axons by electron microscopic autoradiography" (1). This was long before immunogold techniques had become available and accomplishing the use of tritium autoradiography in conjunction with electron microscopy was a true tour de force. The article contained a 3-part illustration that has become an iconic photographic image in the history of neuroscience. For the first time, it clearly demonstrated that the granulated vesicles in the sympathetic axons of the pineal gland contained the neurotransmitter norepinephrine. Although it had been suspected that these vesicles contained packaged neurotransmitter, David's micrographs demonstrated conclusively that this was the case. It was a picture worth 1,000 words. In 1970, Dr. Axelrod won the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine for this and his many other contributions to our understanding of neurotransmission, especially regarding norepinephrine. Axelrod, who was widely noted for his humility and his kindness to his fellows, specifically acknowledged David's contributions to his work in his Nobel address.

Many years later, and in a rather offhand way, David shared a postcard he had received from Dr. Axelrod that was postmarked from Stockholm in which his mentor thanked him for his contributions, which had led to his receiving the Nobel Prize.

In 1963, David moved from the National Institutes of Health to Boston as an Instructor in the Department of Anatomy at Harvard Medical School, then a leading center for the electron microscopic characterization of many organs, including the brain. In 1968, he joined the Department of Anatomy at the Pennsylvania State University Medical Center. After a 6-year tenure there, he decided to return to New York to take training in anatomic pathology and neuropathology. He had become interested in diagnostic neuropathology and realized that he greatly enjoyed the challenge of working up difficult clinical cases.

From 1974 to 1976, he taught anatomy and was a resident in anatomic pathology at Albert Einstein Medical Center of Yeshiva University, where he became certified in neuropathology and anatomic pathology.

In 1976, he received an appointment as Professor of Pathology at the University of Miami Medical Center; he also became an attending neuropathologist and director of Diagnostic Microscopy at Jackson Hospital. He continued his academic career with an appointment at Wayne State University in Detroit, where he also worked as a neuropathologist in area hospitals.

In 1986, I (Daniel P. Perl) was appointed Director of the Neuropathology Division at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York and needed someone to take charge of its large and complex diagnostic service. In considering possible candidates, David Wolfe seemed the obvious choice. I called Robert Terry, who had served as his former mentor and chair at Albert Einstein and asked him if he thought David was up to the job. Bob simply said, "David Wolfe is the smartest person I have ever worked with and is a superb neuropathologist." Terry's department had trained some of the most talented research and diagnostic neuropathologists and neuroscientists in the world so this was quite an impressive assessment for me to consider.

Based on Bob's recommendation, I hired David and, for the next 20 years, he led the diagnostic service at Mount Sinai. He was a gifted diagnostic surgical neuropathologist with an experienced eye for detail. He had an encyclopedic knowledge of the literature, knowing the details of both the classic papers of the past as well as cutting-edge findings then being published. He would use that knowledge plus his keen analytic mind to evaluate cases to deliver the correct diagnosis. It appeared that, the more complex the diagnostic problem, the better David enjoyed the challenge.

David was an excellent teacher of residents and fellows. He did not suffer fools and was repelled by intellectual laziness. He especially enjoyed working with trainees who were eager to learn and were willing to put in the effort to try to keep up with him.

David was also a gifted photographer with a trained artistic eye. He approached photographing cases with that background and often spent hours getting the correct color balance, contrast, and, in particular, composition of his photomicrographs. He was skilled in the darkroom and, through choices in filters and film (in the days before Photoshop), could produce case photos that were both scientifically informing and works of art. The composition of his photos was especially important to David, and he spent time to make sure extraneous and irrelevant distracting elements were removed from his images. I shared some of these interests and, for me, watching his presentation at a tumor board was a unique experience in seeing the interphase of science, medicine, and art through the pictures of his cases.

In 1989, he presented the morphologic features of a newly identified form of neuroaxonal dystrophy, Schindler disease, which is related to a deficiency in α -N-acetylgalactosaminidase, at the Annual Meeting of the American Association of Neuropathologists (of which he was a member throughout his career). David worked long and hard on this presentation, taking literally thousands of photomicrographs and electron microscopic images of a brain biopsy and autopsy on the first diagnosed case. This presentation showed David Wolfe in his element, and he especially wanted to choose the most informing and also most pleasing illustrations of the case for his 10-minute presentation. It was a visually spectacular demonstration of morphology as presented by a uniquely talented scientist/artist. The paper won the Matthew T. Moore Award for the best clinical presentation of the meeting, and the findings were subsequently published in the New England Journal of Medicine (2).

David was also a licensed medical examiner in the states of Florida and Michigan, where he worked with Coroner's offices in the cities of Detroit and Miami. After his retirement, he served as an expert witness in a number of shaken baby cases.

He had remarried Virginia (Gia) Segal, who predeceased him in 2012.

David was a consummate New Yorker; no one took more advantage of the cultural activities in the city than he did. He was a student of art and film, and he and his wife Gia were a constant presence in numerous coffee houses, avant-garde cinemas, on and off Broadway theaters, art galleries, and concert halls throughout the city, especially in the West Village neighborhood in which they lived. David did not dabble in his outside interests; he pursued them deeply. He could speak knowledgeably and at length about a remarkably wide range of topics. He was the only one I ever knew who would religiously read every issue of the New York Review of Books from cover to cover. He would frequently share articles that he thought I would be interested in, complete with his numerous insightful and frequently humorous (and irreverent) comments lining their margins. He continued to pursue his interest in photography and, with an array of extremely expensive professional-level equipment, he produced magnificent photographs (mostly in black and white) related to his travels as well as ordinary objects (especially their cats) in his apartment. In another life, I am certain that his abilities as a photographer could have supported a distinguished career in that endeavor.

David was a uniquely gifted and complex individual. For those of us who took the time to get to know him, we cherished his friendship and found him to be a fascinating, brilliant, and multifaceted person. He had a quirky sense of humor and throughout his life enjoyed using his extremely talented intellectual capabilities in pursuit of his numerous interests. He will be missed by his many professional and personal friends. He was a person out of another era and, as they say, “they don't make them like that anymore.”

After retiring, David moved to The Forest at Duke, a retirement community associated with Duke University in the Raleigh-Durham area. As might be expected, soon after arriving in that community, he formed a film society that was extremely popular. David died of respiratory failure at Duke University Hospital in Durham, North Carolina, on June 3, 2014. He is survived by his first wife Shelagh Foreman, his 2 children Alexander Emery Wolfe and Gillian Fraser Wolfe Ware, and 2 grandchildren Ian Xavier Ware and Imani Mairae Ware.
