TO HAVE BEEN ON BOARD THE TUSCANIA

Special to The American.
KYLE, Texas, Feb. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wallace of this place, are very uneasy about their son, James R. Wallace, who is a member of Co. D, 6th battalion, 20th engineers, and is supposed to have been on the Tuscania, which was torpedoed off the Irish coast Wednesday evening. Mr. Wallace is very popular in Kyle and the earnest hope is felt that he is one of the survivors. He was born and reared at Kyle, but has not lived here for several years.

CARLSON, Judy

Judy Carlson recently died on March 26, 2015 in the company and care of her immediate family. Her long life of 86 years ended after a struggle with Alzheimer's disease. Living in Austin with her husband, John Benton Carlson, they enjoyed 66 years of marriage that demonstrated the true nature of unselfish love.

Julia (Judy) Helen Wallace was born on September 14, 1928, to her parents James Robert Wallace, and her mother, Melia (Amelia) Eloise Ridgeway. As her father held many jobs over the years in Central Texas, Judy lived in cities such as Kyle, Killeen, Kerrville, and Austin. Following in her mother's footsteps, Judy pursued a nursing career with an education at the Seton Hospital in Austin, Texas.

While in school, she was required to take a class in chemistry at St. Edwards University in South Austin. Her professor did not believe women should go to college and tried to flunk every female student, which numbered almost 30. As only a few passed the class, Judy was one of the successful students. Her ambition was to be a dietician, which she fulfilled later in life becoming a Weight Watcher's Counselor for 32 years. She also worked with various doctors through the years.

Before finishing college, however, Judy met and married John Carlson on December 11, 1948. Together they raised 4 children, Bruce Robert, Linda Arlene, James Richard, and Donna Marie. Judy and John also have 4 grandchildren Benton Robert and Brian Reed, children of Bruce and Lisa Carlson, Jacqueline Marie Reichert and Benjamin William Reichert, children of Walter and Donna Reichert. Judy was loved and admired by all who knew her.

Judy and John were also charter members of the Crestview United Methodist Church in Austin, in 1953. They both served in many volunteer roles for more than 60 years. Judy was often found teaching Sunday school classes and organizing functions both at Church and at her home. A fond memory of her children was the numerous parties at her house with her many friends from Church.

Judy will be missed by all who knew her. Services in honor of her will be held at the Crestview United Methodist Church at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 29, 2015. Although we all grieve for her loss to us, we can take solace in the knowledge that she is at rest in the arms of her Lord Jesus whom she loved and served.

The family will be receiving guests on Saturday, March 28, 2015 from 3:00 – 5:00 pm at Cook-Walden Funeral Home at 6100 N Lamar Blvd, Austin, TX.

Words of comfort may be left for the family at www.cook-waldenfuneralhome.com

CONFEDERATE BIOGRAPHIES

---

One of these biographical sketches of members of Camp Ben McCulloch, and other ex-Confederates in this section, will be published each week.

H. C. WALLACE.

It does seem that in a life of seventy-six years one ought to have to his credit many acts of usefulness, and great deeds performed. But in this, my life has been so near a blank, I feel reluctant to undertake a resume of it. Having moved to Kyle the first of March, 1881, nearly thirty-six years ago, and except a little less than six years of this time have made this my home, having lived here a little over thirty years, and so close in touch with Kyle people the nearly six years I was away, it would be presumptuous for me to tell you anything of my life for the past thirty-six years. That and nearly four years in the Army leave me but little to say of myself, otherwise than my connection with the Confederate Army.

I was born April 25, 1841, in Livingston Co., Mo., which makes me seventy-six years old today. On the farm where I was born I lived until I joined the Confederate Army in 1861. Then little over twenty years of age, I was in school when the war broke out, soon after which our school closed. However I did not join the army until the September following.

At the outbreak of the war, while the other Southern States were seceding and forming the Confederate States Government, Gov. Jackson called the Missouri State Legislature together, when they passed a military bill for the organization of the Missouri State Guard.

The state was divided into districts. For each district there was to be appointed a Brigadier General, who was supposed to organize a brigade in his district, the whole to be commanded by a commander-in-chief, with the rank of Major General. Gen. Sterling Price was appointed commander-in-chief, and Captain W Y Stack of our county was appointed brigadier general of our district. It was but a little while until Gen Price had an army of several thousand men. Under this organization the Missouri troops fought the first few months of the war. It was not until the latter part of the year they transferred to the Confederate Army.

I left home August 28, 1861, in company with my brother, Samuel L Wallace, and two brothers of our stepmother, Monroe and Chas E Williams, and started south to join Gen Price, who was then marching north from where they had fought the Federal Army under Gen Lyons, who was killed and his army badly defeated.

We met Price's army about a week after we left home, by which time our little squad of four had recruited to a pretty good company. When we met the army, we scattered out, each joining the company where he had friends and acquaintances. Our little squad of four joined Co K, Capt Small's Company, Hughes' Regiment, Slack's Brigade.

Two weeks later we fought the battle of Lexington, capturing the garrison of about 3,500 Federal soldiers. Some features of that engagement might be interesting, but would require too much space to tell.

After a few weeks we leisurely fell back to Springfield, where we went into camp, remaining until about the middle of February.

While here nearly all our command was mustered into the Confederate service. About half or more of our company I being one of them, joined Capt Churchill Clark's artillery company, where I remained until the close of the war. When first organized we were assigned to Gen. Little's Brigade.

About the middle of February Gen. Sturgis' army marched against us at Springfield. We then fell back some thirty or forty miles into Arkansas, where we were joined in a few days by Gen. Van Dorn, Gen. Sturgis having stopped just after crossing the Arkansas line. Being reinforced by Gen. Van Dorn's army, we retraced our steps and attacked Gen Sturgis' army and fought the battle of Elkhorn, or Pea Ridge, as it was known by some. Here Capt. Clark and

Gen Slack were killed, and I might add, both armies whipped. For a while after this our company was commanded by our First Lieutenant, Jas. L. Harris. A few weeks later we were ordered to Memphis, Tenn., where we camped for a few weeks. While there our Second Lieutenant, Houston King, was appointed Captain of our company. From Memphis we went to Corinth, Miss., and except for an excursion up into West Tennessee by a part of our company with a regiment of cavalry, we staid the balance of the year in Mississippi, and were in practically every engagement of any importance in North Mississippi during the time, including the battles of Iuka and Corinth. At Iuka Gen Price was in command and our brigade commander, Gen. Little, was killed. At Corinth Gen. Van Dorn was in command.

Shortly after the battle of Corinth Gen. Van Dorn was placed in charge of the cavalry
of the army, soon after which he asked for some artillery company to volunteer to go with him.
Our company at once volunteered, and we were transferred to his cava'ry command, which
was composed of two brigades,
one of the Mississippi regiments
and Balentines Batallion of Mis-

Mississippi and Tennessee, commanded first by Gen. Cusby, then by Gen. Armstrong, then by Gen. W. H. Jackson. The other brigade, composed of the Third, Sixth, and Ninth Texas Cavalry and Whitfield's Legion, commanded at first by Gen. Whitfield, then by Gen. L. S. Ross. With this cavalry command we remained until the close of the war, part of the time with one brigade and part of the time with the other.

In the spring of 1863 we went from Mississippi to Middle Tennessee. While there part of our company with the above Sixth Cavalry was off on detached duty down on the Tennessee and Duck Rivers. One Sunday morning we took our position on the bank of the Tennessee River and had been there but a little while when we discovered the smoke several miles up the river from a fleet of boats coming down the river. In the fleet were two gunboats and seven transports loaded with infantry and cavalry. Our command was divided into two parts and took positions on the bank of the river a quarter of a mile apart. I was with the part farthest down the river. When the boats got to those of our command farthest up the river the infantry and cavalry aboard did not seem to be prepared for them, and wounded only a few and killed three, I believe, including Major White of Waco, Texas, but when they got down to where we were, further down the river, they seemed to be prepared for us. Our cavalry was lying down and shooting, but we artillerymen, of course, had to stand up in full view of those in the boats, and of the eight with the gun I helped to work, two were killed and three of us were wounded, one of whom died in a few days. I was shot in the side, just under my left arm, and the bullet came out in my back, cutting a notch in my shoulder blade that is there yet.

The infantry and cavalry on these boats began to land above and below us, and in a few minutes would have had us surrounded, so we fell back and our doctor left me at a house about ten miles back with a family by the name of Maning, where I staid about a week, then moved to another house nearby, where I staid about three months with a family named Crews, where I was treated most kindly by all of the family. My wound was about healed by this time.

In the meantime our cavalry commander, Gen. Van Dorn, had been killed by D. Peters about some family troubles, and our command had gone back to Mississippi, and was near Vicksburg when that place fell, so I started out to follow them up,
 and was on the road about ten days before I joined them at Jackson, Miss., walking about or more than half the distance.
 I walked practically all the way
 from Pulaski, Tenn., to Columbus, Miss., alone. We remained in Mississippi until the spring of 1864, when we went to Georgia and were in quite a number of engagements with that army during the spring and summer. I was within a few miles of Atlanta when it was captured by Gen. Sherman. The two armies had been facing each other in line of battle all the summer, and fighting more or less nearly every day for about four months. Most of this time our cavalry brigade occupied the extreme left of our army, and was in almost constant line of battle day and night, fighting or skirmishing almost every day. But after the fall of Atlanta everything seemed to lull, and there was no other fighting of any consequence between the two armies.

For some time our company had been promised new guns, so during this lull we were notified the new guns were at Columbus, Ga., ready for us. A detail of the company was made to take our old guns to Columbus and exchange them for the new ones, and while they were gone, which was about five days, we were left without anything to fight with. In the meantime, while we were lying there without any guns, our army made a flank movement and went north into Middle Tennessee, leaving us behind waiting for our guns. When they arrived our army had been gone three or four days, and instead of following them up, Gen. Sherman, with his army, moved south thru Georgia to the coast and our company was ordered to Columbus, Miss. So we missed the battles of Franklin and Nashville, the only fights of any consequence that we ever missed in which our brigade was engaged. The Monroe Williams was killed in battle near Yazoo City, Miss. My brother, Samuel L. Wallace, died at his home in Missouri about eight years ago. About the same time C. E. Williams died at his home at Sherman, Texas.

A few weeks after the war closed I returned to our home in Missouri, and notwithstanding the bitter feeling then existing between Northern and Southern sympathizers that staid at home during the war, I think I had the friendship of all the Northern soldiers who returned home, as well as nearly all the Northern sympathizers. In our neighborhood perhaps a majority were Southern sympathizers, but having gone thru with what they had for three or four years, they were almost afraid to be seen in a crowd that was known all to be winter of 1864 we spent along or near the line of Mississippi and Alabama, where we again joined our brigade and army when they came out of Tennessee. We were near Pickensville, Ala, when the war closed and we got our parols and discharges. This ended my career as a soldier.

Of our little squad of four that left home together in 1861, I am the only one now living.

Southerners, seldom ever expressed themselves on the question where they could be heard by a Northerner, while they all knew just how the Southern soldiers stood who had returned home. They were not hampered in any such manner. I staid at home several months, then after drifting around for a little over a year, but a little while at any one place, I landed at Columbus, Texas, about the latter part of March, 1867, where I lived alone a little over six and one-half years, going to Schulenburg in November, 1873. I was married to Miss Julia L. Frierson on Jan. 18, 1874. We lived at Schulenburg until about Feb., 1880, when we moved to Rockdale, and to Kyle about May 1, 1881. These dates are all taken from memory and some of them may not be exactly correct, but approximately so.

As to my church membership,
I joined the Methodist church
when about fourteen years old.
I had been almost raised up in the church. Until I was about twelve years old our house was
the preaching place for our neighborhood, and Methodist,
Baptist, a n d Presbyterian preachers almost made it their home when in our neighborhood.

I would like to mention many engagements I was in during the war, and many incidents of battle and camp life, as I first thought of doing when I commenced to write, but soon found
it was going to be drawn out too long, and contracted as it is, I have to beg your pardon for the length of it.

BEAUMONT LUMBERMAN FALLS ONTO SAW, DIES

BEAUMONT, March 18.—W. P. Wallace, 55, of Beaumont, prominent Southeast Texas lumberman, was killed late this afternoon in a saw-mill accident at Hillister while inspecting the Tyler County Lumber Company mill, part of his holdings.

Wallace, who was on crutches from an automobile accident in November, was thrown into a circular saw. His right shoulder was severed.

J. D. Hayes, the millwright, was repairing the carriage and had just given orders to start the motor. Obeying Hayes' motion to step aside when the saws moved, Wallace placed his right crutch on the rail of the carriage. The crutch slipped and he was thrown into the saw.
