Official Dies While Lecturing To Bureau of Standards Class

Charles G. Weber, 55, assistant chief of the paper division at the Bureau of Standards, collapsed this morning while delivering a lecture at the Bureau and died a few minutes later, apparently the victim of a heart attack.

Mr. Weber lived at 3807 North Upland Country Club drive, Arlington. He had been with the bureau more than 20 years and had been active in the development of new paper manufacturing techniques.

He was lecturing to a class of bureau employes on technical aspects of paper manufacturing when he became ill, officials said. While standing at a blackboard illustrating his talk, he suddenly excused himself and then started toward a seat in the front of the room. He collapsed before reaching it.

Mr. Weber.

Dr. William Frank, medical officer at the bureau, pronounced him dead a few minutes later.

Mr. Weber was a paper mill technician and active in the lumber industry before coming to the bureau's paper division in 1928, the bureau said.

He was a member of the Technical Association of Pulp and Paper Industry, American Society for Testing Materials, Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Technical Association of Lithographic Industry.

Mr. Weber is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gladys H. Weber; a daughter, Miss Muriel Agnes Weber; five brothers, Willis and Edward Weber, both of Atwater, Ohio; Harry Weber of Chattanooga, Amos Weber of Detroit, and Wallace Weber, McDonald, Ohio.

He was a past master of the William R. Singleton Lodge No. 30, Masons; a past high priest of the William R. Singleton Chapter, and a past patron of the Friendship Chapter No. 7, Order of the Eastern Star.

Memorial Corner Stone Sealed

EFFORTS MADE TO PRESERVE CONTENTS INDEFINITELY.

SCIENCE was courted to preserve the list of the 26,048 men of the District of Columbia who served in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and the Coast Guard during the World War, and the other data which today was sealed in the corner stone of the District's War Memorial in Potomac Park.

The memorial data which might be viewed by some distant posterity was sealed in a specially prepared copper box and placed within the carved niche on the inner face of the corner stone by Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, a member of the District of Columbia War Memorial Commission. There were no "exercises" attending Gen. Stephan's act at 10 o'clock this morning, but simple matter-of-fact execution of a masonry task, in which he was assisted by Frederick H. Brooke, architect for the memorial.

Typed on Long-Lived Paper.

The list of the District's war service men was typed on a special 100 per cent cotton fiber paper of the kind used in currency printing. This paper was furnished by the office of C. W. Scribner, chief of the paper division of the Bureau of Standards, and it is the most long-lived paper known to science today.

The box itself, a container a foot square by 18 inches long, was sealed after the contents had been placed within. Then Charles G. Weber, also of the paper division of the Bureau of Standards, exhausted the air and introduced nitrogen, one of the most inert gases. It is by the absence of oxygen that decay of the paper documents will be prevented—certainly for many, many years—it was explained on behalf of Mr. Weber today.

Plans of Memorial.

Besides the list of the District's Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard men, the copper box contains the plans of the memorial, a copy of The Star and coins and paper currency of the latest dates.

The photograph shows Gen. Stephan wielding the trowel as the marble sealing stone was tamped into place behind the copper container. Standing behind and to the left of Gen. Stephan is seen Mr. Brooke, architect for the memorial.
