INJURED VETERAN DIES VICTIM OF TUSCANIA TAKEN BY HARDSHIPS

(By The Associated Press)

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 21. — Philip Wetmore of The Dalles, who was one of the soldiers on board the Tuscania when that vessel was torpedoed in 1917 by a German submarine, died at the United States government hospital here yesterday. The man's death resulted from complications growing out of the hardships which he endured while floating about in the icy waters of the Atlantic for 24 hours before he was picked up. After being picked up the boat which rescued him was wrecked on the coast of Scotland and he barely managed to drag himself ashore.

SURVIVOR OF THE TUSCANIA

Is Nephew of Elmiran—Tells of the Wreck—He Is Yet Under Treatment in Glasgow Hospital.

Philip E. Wetmore of the Pacific Coast, a nephew of W. J. Wetmore of 374 West Fourth street, this city, was one of the passengers on the ocean steamer Tuscania, which was sunk by a German submarine off the coast of Great Britain a few weeks ago. He is yet in a Glasgow, Scotland, hospital, under care for pneumonia, contracted from the severe exposure following the wrecking of the vessel.

His experience in the sinking of the Tuscania is told by Mr. Wetmore in a letter from England.

"We were waiting for 6 o'clock tea. The ship seemed to rock to port and slowly began to list. She shivered like a broken pane of glass and then the lights went out. Soon they were on again. The engineer had hitched up an auxiliary dynamo.

"There was no panic. Every man knew his place. The ropes were rotten on some of the boats and they were wrecked in launching. Three destroyers came up and took the men off. I went down a rope into the lifeboat, but when the next man tried it, it broke and he fell in upon us.

"Then we pulled away and were washed ashore on the rocks (at a point deleted by the censor). We were in the boat about five hours. Then we lay in the seaweed the rest of the night.

"There had been 20 men in our boat, but none of us knew how to handle it. She was dashed to pieces against the rocks and the waves washed us ashore. All but two of us were saved. About 9 o'clock next morning we found a farmhouse."

2 lived out of his lifeboat of 20 soldiers – "Elmire (NY) Star-Gazette" Saturday 8 Jun 1918 p 7
