HOWARD E. WINTERBOTTOM

PALS ON TUSCANIA REFUSED TO PART

Howard Winterbottom, of Smithtown Branch, Writes of Experience.

Smithtown Branch, L. I., March 21 —"We fooled the Kaiser once and we are now feeling fine after suffering from bad colds, and intend to get even with the Kaiser for some of the lives of our comrades-in-arms that he (the Kaiser) has taken," is what Howard Winterbottom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winterbottom of this place says in a letter to his sister, Miss Lillian Winterbottom.

Young Winterbottom, with a close friend, John Maitland, was on board the torpedoed Tuscania, as members of the 107th Engineer Train, Thirty-second Division. He was detailed to get the lifeboats over the side when the torpedo ripped the starboard side of the vessel. He tells his sister that while he wouldn't go through it again of a million dollars, he wouldn't have missed the experience that he had for a like amount.

Winterbottom has nothing but words of commendation for his friend Maitland. Maitland should have left the ship long before his friend, but he refused to do so, saying they would stick together and if he (John) went down with the ship, he would go. They were both taken off in company with their second lieutenant in the last lifeboat and were later picked up by a patrol boat and landed in Ireland where he says they were treated like kings.

At the hotel where they stopped Winterbottom met a man who had been in America and had met his father at the horse show. He gave them everything that they needed.

Flamingo Road (1949)

Zachary Scott and Sidney Greenstreet

Mildred Pierce is one of Michael Curtiz' most famous films, and it may be the role that Joan Crawford is best known for. But a few years later the two collaborated on another film, which is lesser known today, but I think actually more interesting.

Flamingo Road tells the story of Lane Bellamy, a woman who we first see dancing in a cheap carnival, but who rises to become the wife of a powerful politician. The story is pure melodrama, but the film is an interesting study of power and corruption. The action plays out in a small town, and the title refers to the section where the rich folks live. When the carnival she dances in skips town to escape the law, Lane decides she's tired of running and stays behind, going to work as a waitress in a local cafe. All she wants to do is work a job and make a living, but she inadvertently gets drawn into a conflict between two powerful politicians.

Lane is a woman living in a world run by men. She's happy enough waiting tables in the local diner, but when she falls for lawman Fielding Carlisle she incurs the wrath of Sheriff Semple, who has other plans for his deputy. Semple has her fired, and tells her she'd best leave town. Angered by the way she's been mistreated, Lane decides to stick around and goes to work as a "hostess" in a "road house". Here she meets politically connected businessman Dan Reynolds, who is immediately taken with her.

Joan Crawford, tired of running.

This sets up the conflict that drives the movie on more than one level. On the one hand, you have Lane growing closer to Dan, even though she's still in love with Fielding. At the same time, Semple is infuriated by Lane's rise in society, and ends up mounting a political attack on Dan as part of a power grab.

Robert Wilder's screenplay offers a fascinating view of the way politics and business intertwine, showing how deals are made behind closed doors long before they ever see the light of day. (Wilder also authored the original novel, and adapted it for the stage with his wife, Sally.) Curtiz knows this territory well. In the later part of his career, the director made a number of films exploring the crooked world we live in, notably in Casablanca, but also in Four's a Crowd, The Breaking Point, The Helen Morgan Story and King Creole. Lane, like many of Curtiz' protagonists, is someone just trying to stay in the game even though she knows the deck is stacked against her. In the 40s and 50s the director repeatedly focussed on characters who struggle to survive in a world that seems bent on grinding them down.

The most complex character in the film is Dan Reynolds, the powerful contractor who falls for Lane. He's essentially an honest man who knows that projects don't get built on honesty. Dan understands that everybody's looking out for themselves, and he's willing to play the game, but he tries to make sure all the players get taken care of. Curtiz takes us into the smoke-filled rooms where local businessmen play cards, booze it up, and make deals. These scenes play out with a smooth, matter-of-fact ease. The screenwriter and the director both know this melieu, and they also know that, whether we like it or not, this is how the world works.

Playing cards and cutting deals.

There are people who say Crawford is too old for the role, but I disagree. I have no idea how old the character was in the novel, but I think the fact that Crawford was in her 40s when she played the part brings added layers to it. When we first see Lane dancing in the carnival it's clear she's been in this game way too long. A young woman might see it as an adventure. A middle-aged woman can't see it as anything more than a way to make ends meet. After the carnival has fled, we see Lane by herself, lying on a cot in a tent, listening to the radio. She's tired. She feels ground down. A younger actress couldn't have expressed the weariness that Crawford brings to this scene. When the deputy walks in on her, she's too tired to be fearful. She's been hassled by the law before.

This is the kind of role that Crawford knew well. She probably could have played it in her sleep, but she's not sleepwalking here. Lane's weary cynicism rings true. The way Crawford plays the part, we know she's been around the block a few times. And she makes her part in the love triangle believable. Lane likes and respects Dan, but she can't get Fielding out of her mind. And when Dan realizes where he stands and walks out, Crawford makes us feel Lane's misery and shame. Yeah, she's done all this before, but she still does it really well.

David Brian and Joan Crawford

David Brian has a smoothness and an easy charm as Dan that makes it easy to believe he's one of the boys in the back room, but he also projects a strength that makes it clear he's got principles. He's not just out for a buck. As always, Zachary Scott slides right into his character and makes us forget he's playing a part. Maybe his unobtrusive skill is the reason his flawless performances never attracted the attention that lesser actors got. Scott shows us early on that Deputy Fielding Carlisle is basically a decent guy with absolutely no backbone. He loves Lane, but he won't fight for her, and so he not only loses her respect but his own self-respect.

But maybe the most impressive performance in the film is Sydney Greenstreet as the Machiavellian sheriff. Greenstreet was a masterful actor, and he's a powerful presence in this movie. There's no ambiguity in the character. Sheriff Semple is absolutely ruthless and completely corrupt. So it's impressive that Greenstreet's performance is as compelling as it is. It could have been a total cliché, but the actor brings so much life to the role, he makes this vile old man so vivid, it's hard to take your eyes off him.

Part of the reason this melodrama works so well is that the world these characters inhabit is so completely imagined. Curtiz was surrounded by technicians who were masters of their craft, and they were expert at creating cafes, carnivals and construction sites on a soundstage. Art director Leo K. Kuter and set decorator Howard Winterbottom breathe life into all the places and spaces that make up this small town. Ted McCord's subtly textured cinematography brings everything together as an expressive whole. I can't understand why McCord has never gotten the attention he deserves. A seasoned pro with an incredible eye, he had gift for creating images with depth and texture whether he was working on a set or on location. Curtiz and McCord worked together a number of times, which leads me to believe the director valued his abilities. I don't see how anyone could look at his work on Treasure of the Sierra Madre, The Breaking Point, and East of Eden without coming to the conclusion that he was one of the best cinematographers in Hollywood.

I probably don't have to tell you that Lane's situation goes from bad to worse, until the film comes to a harrowing climax, and then quickly settles into a reassuring resolution. I'm sure you already know the territory. Curtiz knew it, too, and he knew he had to deliver what audiences expected. It's not the big dramatic moments that make this film, it's what comes in between. It's the way the townspeople bend over backwards to stay on the sheriff's good side. It's the glimpses we get of men making deals over liquor and cigars. And it's the way the director presents the poignant reality of a middle-aged woman stranded in a small town, trying to figure out what her next move is.

Striking a patriotic chord based on cardinal principles of American democracy, Mayor Charles C. McKey drew applause of more than 250 people gathered in the Community building last night for a public patriotic rally sponsored by Pomona post, No. 2018, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

"Some of you are here tonight to take the obligation of this veterans' organization," Mayor McKey stated, "and that should be a reminder in these times that people of the country have important obligations they should meet."

Among these obligations he mentioned right and proper enforcement of the law, exercise of the franchise and preservation of sanctity of the home. "There is nothing the matter with our country. The trouble is with us."

He urged maintenance of home integrity, adherence to principles of strength, gentleness, love and loyalty and other things that make life worth while. In speaking of the founding and history of the United States, he declared as long as civil liberty and democratic ideals are preserved this people will never perish.

"Where Old Glory waves you will always have a country." He expressed hope for continued success of the organization.

Judge Walter Guerin, master of ceremonies, presented the mayor. In his introductory remarks, Judge Guerin declared the veterans banded together for a good purpose and praised the women for their work at home when the men were out on the battlefields.

Walter B. Schlueter, commander of the post, presided, and after the colors had been advanced the Rev. Phil B. Ellsworth pronounced the invocation. Following the address by the mayor, Mr. Schlueter announced that all old soldiers belonging to the Grand Army of the Republic here have been made honorary members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. In speaking of all veterans, he said, "We feel we are all one working for a common cause."

Roll of drums outside marked approach of the 15-piece drum and bugle corps from Kellogg post, No. 1680, Veterans of Foreign Wars of Santa Ana. They marched into the room and gave a brief demonstration.

Eight recruits were obligated last night. They were: Denis L. Snyder, William B. Herbert, Eugene E. Bateman, Levi E. Knutson, Louis W. Mechler, Herbert W. Hulme, Candido Saracco and Glen C. Reeves. One of the guests of the evening was H. R. Winterbottom, member of Donald C. Monroe post, No. 817, Long Island, N. Y.

Following a program of entertainment dancing was enjoyed until 11:30 p. m. Refreshments then were served.

'Flying Squadron' Of Fake Drys Set To Hop for Prison

Five Pseudo Prohibition Agents Plead Guilty to Charge of Shakedowns

A "flying squadron" of five pseudo-prohibition agents pleaded guilty in Brooklyn Federal Court today to charges of conspiracy and were remanded for sentencing Friday.

Assistant Federal Attorney Murray Kriendler told Judge Grover M. Er with a sixth individual serving from 15 to 30 years in Sing Sing, "shook down speakeasy and legitimate cafe proprietors of probably more than $10,000 during Nov., 1931."

"Working in teams of three each, they would go into a speakeasy, buy a drink, then display fake badges and extort from $200 to $500 with threatened arrest as the alternative to payment," he said. "If the cafe had no liquor for sale, they would threaten to wreck the place. Though the number of their victims who would make statements was naturally limited, investigation discovered they made some days as much as $2,000."

Smithtown and Kings Park, L. I., localities in which one of the defendants, a former State trooper, was at one time stationed, was the sole area within this district where the "flying squadron" operated.

The former State trooper is John Broddock of 4016 Carpenter Ave., the Bronx. The others are Albert Hartman, 804 E. 233d St., the Bronx, and Henry Mack, Ralph Haight and William W. Jones, all of Tappan, N. Y. The sixth squadron member, Edward Fauchot, was sentenced on conviction last December in Suffolk County in connection with one of the shakedown operations.

Complainants ready to testify were:

FIVE WHO POSED AS LIQUOR AGENTS HEAR SENTENCES

Sixth Man and Ringleader of Crooks Got 15 to 30 Years in Suffolk Court.

Five fake prohibition agents, one of them an ex-State trooper, who "shook down" Long Island roadhouse proprietors, today were sentenced to serve terms in the Federal Penitentiary by Judge Moscovitz.

A sixth man, Edmund Fauchol, who was the alleged ringleader of the gang, had been sentenced in Suffolk County to serve 15 to 30 years in Sing Sing, Assistant Federal Attorney Murray Kreindler told the Court.

The five who had pleaded guilty were: Jack Braddock, 32, former State trooper, of Carpenter ave., the Bronx, sentenced to a year and six months; Albert Hartman, 28, of 802 East 233d st., the Bronx, a year and a day; Ralph Haight, Henry Mack and William Walling Jones, all of Tappan, Rockland County, sentenced to two years. Sentence was suspended in the case of the last three and they were placed on probation.

It was brought out by Mr. Kreindler that the men during the month of December, 1931, posed as Federal agents and mulcted Long Island and up-State roadhouse proprietors for large sums.

Among their victims were Howard Winterbottom of the Brooklyn House, Kings Park; L. I. who paid over $250 to the fake agents; Frank Fried of the Riverhead Inn, Smithtown, L. I., paid $200; Richard Unruhe of Central Islip, gave up $100; and its cost John L. Bauer of Smithtown Hotel, $200.

Braddock was dismissed from the State troopers when he took $37 from another State trooper in a slot machine seizure.

MOST BLUES AND MOST MONEY TOO

CAPITAL SUCCESS OF MR. WATSON AT HORSE SHOW—OTHER WINNINGS SUMMARIZED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The horses owned by C. W. Watson, of Baltimore, were the most successful at the twenty-third annual horse show that closed on Saturday night. These horses won 14 first, 5 second, 2 third and 1 reserve ribbon, and the total value of the prizes won was $3,540. Mrs. Watson, who is an enthusiastic horsewoman, drove the exhibit in several classes, and their success was in a large measure due to the way she handled the reins. The horses are managed by Frank Winterbottom, who used to be manager for Eben D. Jordan, and when showing the latter's horses scored the most wins.

The Watson exhibit was not a large one, but Lord Baltimore and My Maryland won four prizes, including the National Horse Show Challenge Cup, and made part of the four-in-hand team that won twice. Ringing Bells, Chatterbox, Kitty Grey, Norena, Lady Baltimore, Virginia and My Maryland II. were the other successful horses, and they won in harness classes, fours and tandems.

Watson Horses Take Ribbons

Four of Them Sweep the Board in Harness Classes at the Long Branch Show.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 1.—Four horses from the stable of C. W. Watson of Fairmont, West Virginia, swept the board in the harness classes at the Horse Show Wednesday, winning every time they entered the ring—four in all.

It was the first appearance of the Watson string this season, and their victories were enhanced by the fact that they were competing with the entries of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and R. P. McGrann, the latter fresh from the International Horse Show in London, where Mr. McGrann won 22 ribbons.

Mrs. Watson drove Ringing Bell before a basket phaeton in the class for women's harness horses, and it was the opinion of all the experts that the little chestnut hackney mare made the score of her career, though she looked a trifle under the height for the work.

Driven by Frank Winterbottom, the trainer of the Watson horses, My Maryland and My Maryland II scored in the tandem class after a brilliant display, and the same horses, with Lord Baltimore, won again in the class for the best collection of three high steppers in single harness.

Mr. Watson's remaining victory was won with the Chestnut mare, Moonshine, an imported hackney purchased in England last season. Though a high goer she lacked finish about the head and was not without fault at other points. The decision which gave her the blue ribbon and placed Paul A Sorg's fine chestnut gelding, Red Oak, third, was very generally criticised by horsemen.

Kalarama.
Typical Morgan horses are so scarce in these days that the United States government has taken measures to preserve and perpetuate them by establishing a breeding stud in Vermont, says the New York Herald. One of the finest specimens of the type has lately been placed at the head of C. W. Watson's Fairmont Farms, in West Virginia, where he is being crossed with English hackney mares that have won blue ribbons in heavy harness at the leading horse shows. The horse is Kalarama, formerly Sensation, Jr. Frank Winterbottom, the manager of Mr. Watson's show stable, saw him when travelling through Ohio, and was so struck with his beauty and quality that he jumped off the train and bought him before continuing his journey. Mr. Winterbottom considers him the finest horse he ever saw. He is a descendant of Regulator, an old-time Morgan stallion, mentioned in Joseph Battell's Morgan Horse Register as having stood in Hamilton County, Ohio, about fifty years ago.

Will Be Innovation For Horse Shows in This Section

An innovation at Southern California horse shows will be the driving competition for six-in-hand draft teams. No driving competition has heretofore been held south of Stockton and Sacramento. There for two years it has been one of the most wildly applauded numbers on the programs.

At the Pacific International at Portland, Ore., it has been a center of interest for years.

In the Santa Paula Chamber of Commerce $1000 stake there will be two local contestants, one from Portland and one from Sacramento.

A. C. Ruby of Portland has won the event on many occasions and is a master hand with a "bix six." However, C. W. Bowers of Sacramento won the stake at Stockton last week and Ruby could do no better than fourth to Bowers and the two local entries.

Drivers from the ranches of Dos Pueblos Ranch and Improvement Co., and John Lloyd-Butler with the two mentioned above will try conclusions during the evenings of Friday, Saturday and Sunday. There are three showings of driving ability, the score being kept each night, the winner being the driver having the lowest score.

Alfred Meyer has arrived from Los Angeles with two horse vans containing 12 head of horses from his Griffith Park stables.

They include his own and the entries of Gordon Lawrence and Maurice DeMond, and Cliff Lord.

Mr. Meyer brought two heavy harness horses, Lord Devondale and Cremona Lady, and five hunters. The other owners sent hunters and polo ponies.

August Rubel, chairman of the horse show committee, has appointed C. C. Harris of Lexington, Ky., judge for saddle horses; Lieut. Colonel J. J. Fry, Vancouver, B. C., hunters; Frank Winterbottom, harness horses and ponies; Carlton F. Burke, Los Angeles, polo mounts, and Harold A. Ludwig, Van Nuys, for stock horses.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winterbottom of Seattle, are guests of the city this week. Mr. Winterbottom will drive in the trotting races at the county fair.

All the energy of the organization representing the $300,000 investment of E. A. Stuart in the Carnation Farm Stables, the new home of which is located at the Los Angeles County Fair grounds here, is being centered at the present time by John T. Hook, nationally known horse authority and manager of the Carnation Stables, in grooming 25 of the 58 aristocratic equines for the Los Angeles National Horse Show to be held at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, February 4 to 11.

Stuart. Mr. Stuart is very fond of the Hackney pony.

Tip Top made an extra fine showing at San Francisco to win first or second in each event entered. Buggerboo Rose was also third in the big mare stake for five-gaiters. Golden Glow and Jewell MacDonald also showed up to great advantage.

One of the outstanding victories by the local stables came in the three-in-hand pony event. With Cecelia Hoyt DeMille, Hollywood, driving two of the Carnation ponies, the veteran Frank Winterbottom, handled the other leading one, in as beautiful an exhibition as had ever been seen on the coast. First prize was won in this by the local entry.

The brilliance of the spotlight, the famous smile of "Sunny Jim" Rolph as Governor and honor guest, prancing horses, flashing colors and a happy throng—

These combined to make last night "the event" of the Oakland National Horse Show.

And the thrill of thrills for the evening was when Governor Rolph drove into the Oakland Municipal Auditorium arena in a coach and four, and stopped in the center, flooded by spotlights.

He was given a rousing ovation.

FIRE GUTS HORSE SHOW STABLES; FOUR DIE

INCENDIARISM IS BLAMED FOR OAKLAND FIRE

Fifty-Three Valuable
Steeds Burned or Shot to Death

MORE DEAD MAY BE DISCOVERED

Loss to Breeders May Pass $600,000 as Probe Starts

OAKLAND, Cal., Feb. 9. (U.P.)—Incendiaries were blamed by firemen today for the early morning blaze that swept the Oakland horse show stables, killing four or more persons and destroying at least 53 valuable horses.

The activities of two "suspicious-looking" men, the unexplained presence of three empty gasoline containers and reports that the odor of gasoline was detected when the fire raged through the flimsy stables led Fire Chief W. G. Lutkey to order a complete investigation.

Lutkey abandoned the theory that a carelessly thrown cigarette started the blaze when he was informed of the two suspicious characters by John Scott, manager of Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church's stables from Newport, R. I.

Scott said he was walking through the stables shortly before the fire broke out and came upon the men in a whispered conference.

"As I passed them, one said, 'Be careful,' and the other replied, 'I have started fires before,'" Scott told the fire chief. "I didn't think much of it at the time, but it is significant in view of what happened."

The investigation began soon after firemen reported that the bodies of four persons, one of them possibly a woman, had been found.

The bodies of 53 horses, among them some of the best known show horses in the nation, also were located and 49 of them identified. Owners' estimates led to the fear losses in horse flesh may reach $600,000.

Two of the recovered bodies were burned beyond recognition. The other two were identified as those of Michael McCarthy, head of the Carnation stables, and John L. Thoms, Oakland stableman.

The Carnation stables of Pomona, Cal., was the heaviest loser in the fire, its entire string of 16 blooded horses being destroyed. These horses were included in the 49 definitely identified.

Fears that a woman had perished in the fire were dispelled when a woman's purse, found in the ruins, was identified by Mrs. Frank Winterbottom as her property. She is the wife of a show official.

One of the four recovered bodies was burned beyond recognition. The other three were identified as those of Michael McCarthy, head of the Carnation stables; John L. Thoms, stableman of Oakland, and "Big Harvey," a negro hostler.

GREAT DRIVER COMES TO FAIR

Frank Winterbottom Will Show Carnation Hackney Ponies at Local Show

People attending the Los Angeles County fair at Pomona will have an opportunity of seeing several imported Carnation hackney ponies being exhibited for the first time, and driving these will be Frank Winterbottom, considered one of the greatest whips America has ever produced.

These new ponies are Superlative and Rainbow, a beautiful pair under 13.2, and Elect and Exclusive, over 13.2. In the pony list are also Billy Boy and Buckley Alice, who have been shown under the Carnation banner before. The ponies have been imported from Scotland.

In the harness horse division Carnation will show Screen Star and Fascination, a pair of chestnuts under 15.2; Duke of Rutland and Duke of Richmond, oversize blacks, and Attorney, Regina and Virtue, the latter three to be shown in pairs. The veteran of the show ring, Melanchton, pride of E. A. Stuart, owner of Carnation Farm stable, is also to be shown in the tanbark arena this season.

Mr. Winterbottom has a way of getting these horses and ponies to show themselves in full pride. He has the distinction of having won honors at the great Olympic show in London and at the big horse shows of the United States. Where hackneys are known Frank Winterbottom is known.

POMONA EXPLOITS FAIR

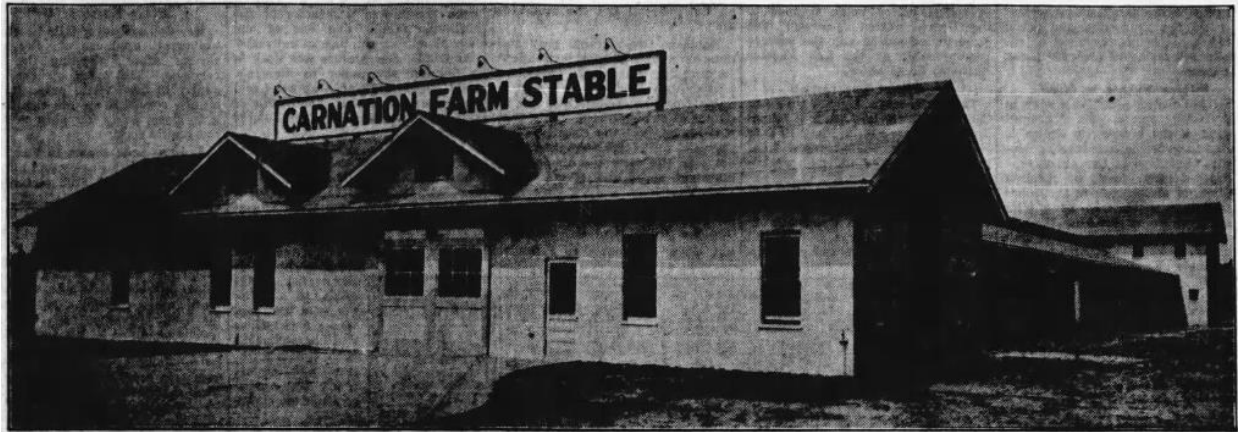

One of the few horse-drawn vehicles in the parade was the entry of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce which called attention in a novel way to the Los Angeles County Fair, held annually in Pomona.

In the old-fashioned equipage, drawn by four blooded English hackneys, rode Ruth and Elsie Reynolds, Ruth Bates, Marjory Towne, Mildred Whiteside, Grace Juhl, Edna May Page and Edward Smith. The driver was Frank Winterbottom. The horses were Duke of Richmond, Duke of Rutland, Glen Avon Victory and Glen Avon Virtue.

Carnation Horses Bring Fame to Pomona

HUGE LOCAL STABLE, HOME OF SOME OF WORLD'S GREATEST SHOW HORSES

YEAR'S PRIZES TOTAL $15,000

Noted Animals Owned by
E. A. Stuart, Stabled at Large Quarters Here

The Carnation stable at Pomona, which today is considered to have the largest aggregation of fine show horses ever assembled in one stable, is but a realization of a boyhood dream of its president, E. A. Stuart.

There are between 55 and 60 of these fine show horses at the stable, many of them having been purchased this year to replace losses suffered in the Oakland horse show fire early in 1931 and also to replace horses that were sold because they did not prove to be of the high quality demanded by Mr. Stuart.

Approximately $15,000 was won in prizes last year by the Carnation saddle horses and this is considered an excellent achievement in view of the fact that there was no show at Seattle in 1931 and that some of the horses were sick en route to and at the American Royal show in Kansas City.

Excerpt:

Capable Staff At Stable

Carnation stable today, under the management of John T. Hook of Pomona, has its greatest aggregation of fine show horses and prospects. Identified with the stable, and associated with Mr. Hook are a number of very capable horsemen, including Don Reavis, the trainer who is well-known for his riding, Frank Winterbottom, trainer of the hackney horses and ponies, and "Splint" Barnett, saddle horse trainer.

At the stable there are high-stepping hackney ponies and harness horses, many of whom have been imported from England and Scotland. Among these is a team of four perfectly-matched black harness horses, as fine as have ever been seen in a hitch anywhere in the United States. Incidentally this four-in-hand team, drawing a brake or tallyho, comprised the basis of the City of Pomona's entry in the 1932 Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade.

A new hazard in the psychology of modern man—"horses have become dreadful animals."

Frank Winterbottom, horsemaster doing the horsing on the set for "The Crusades" opines this new hazard.

"The march of civilization sweeping horses from the street, has made the horse, a gentle animal, a prehistoric beast in the eyes of city dwellers," said Winterbottom. "He snorts, charges, leaps, and in a score of ways strikes terror into timid hearts."

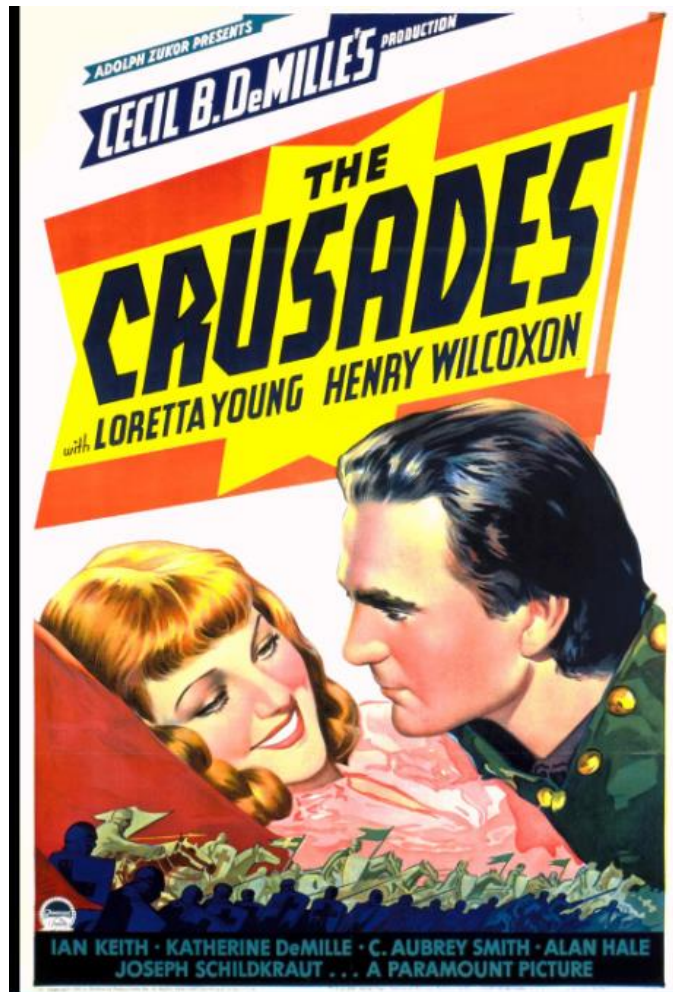

"This inordinate fear of horses bred by a mechanical age, resulted in one casualty the other night when we filmed one of the big scenes. The scene was the siege before the walls of Acre, high point in drama in 'The Crusades.' The scene is marked by the presence of 570 soldiers and half as many horses milling about in the confusion of battle."

"The cameras were turning, and into the scene rolled a formidable engine of destruction—a 36-ton siege tower, as high as a four-story building the like of which modern man has not looked upon. At the same time a horse wheeled. The rider was Henry Wilcoxon, who plays Richard the Lion Heart."

"One of the actors, city reared, was terrified by the animal and chose to take his chance unmounted in the path of the medieval siege tower. He was caught in the wheel and suffered a severe leg injury."

"That man," said Winterbottom, "had no reason to be afraid of the horse. The animal was just changing his position so that he might not have his headquarters towards the siege tower. Nothing could have induced him to step on the actor. Only one out of every 500 is a 'bad horse,' and we never use them!"

WORKOUT—Forest Fire, prize Hackney pony of the Toby Anguish stables in San Fernando Valley, is put through his paces by Frank Winterbottom, 78, trainer.

Hackney Pony Breeder Plans Pacoima Show

PACOIMA, Jan. 20.—Toby Anguish, honorary Mayor of Pacoima and nationally known breeder of Hackney show ponies, is planning a benefit show to be held soon on his six-acre ranch at 9481 Woodman Ave.

His ranch overseer, Frank Winterbottom, received his training beginning more than 60 years ago in England, and Jack Cameron, trainer and tackman who keeps the brass on the 12 show harnesses mirror-bright, also is a product of England.

Anguish's ponies in wartime have appeared only in local shows such as Riviera Country Club and Strickland Park, the latter sponsored by the San Fernando Valley Breeders' Association. He looks forward to the day when his ponies again can travel the country's horse-show circuit, which ends each season in Madison Square Garden, New York.

One of the most outstanding Anguish ponies is Forest Fire, winner of many prizes and sire of most of Anguish's horses. Forest Fire is noted for the high-stepping hock action characteristic of Hackneys.

Frank Winterbottom, the 78-year old who trains Toby Anguish's Hackneys, really puts in a day. Works 10 of the 22 head on that Pacoima ranch. Watch these ponies. They'll make history!

“San Fernando (CA) Valley Times” Monday 23 Jul 1945 p 26

Members of Bakersfield Frontier Days Association today were prepared to launch the largest horse show they have ever offered the southern San Joaquin valley, Herb Vaughan, general manager, reported today. The show will be held in conjunction with the Kern County Fair, September 26, 27 and 28.

There are 200 purebred horses entered in the smart show, which will be featured during the final three nights of the fair with 10 events each evening, he declared.

Sixty of the horses are being entered from Bakersfield with 25 more purebred animals to be shown from other Kern county communities.

Excerpt:

Outstanding in the hackney competition are entries from the Toby Anguish Ranch, Pacoima, which features probably the oldest master of the class and the dean of the trainers.

He is Frank Winterbottom, 80, who has trained hackney ponies for the past 60 years. At the Kern show, Mr. Winterbottom will drive a 3-year-old colt "Sunfire" in the open class singles.

FAMOUS OLD-TIMER AND FOUR YEAR OLD "COMER" MAKE IMPRESSIVE COMBINATION

Sandy Watches Trainer Frank Winterbottom, left, and Assistant Harness "Fire King" for Training Session

SANDY TALKS TO OLDTIMER:

Horse Trainer, 80, Is 'Young' Man

By SANDY FERNANDO

Ever once in a while you run across oldtimers who stay at the top long after the age when most folks retire. The reason they can do it, I reckon, is because they stay young in heart. Or maybe it's because they never get tired of finding something new to tackle.

Take now, for instance, old Frank Winterbottom out at Toby Anguish's place in Pacolima. In his case, I'd say it was a little of both.

Still Enthusiastic

Frank has enjoyed eighty years of living—and that's the only excuse I have for calling him "old." He's a hackney horse trainer, and he goes after his job with the enthusiasm of a youngster. Right now he's mighty tickled about one of the little highsteppers—thinks he'll be the next champion.

When I saw Frank the other morning, he was harnessing four-year-old Fire King for a training session out on the track. Old Frank looked like a kid who's just found a new toy.

"This one's a comer, Sandy," he said, "just watch him work."

Well sir, not being able to speak as an expert, all I can say is that young Fire King looks mighty proud of himself when he gets a chance to show off. His high-stepping trot makes him look like he's prancing with joy all the way around the track. He comes by his spirit naturally, because his pappy—sire, that is—Forest Fire, who lives in the stall next door to him, won the U. S. reserve championship last year.

But like I was saying about old Frank, he's still going strong after over sixty years' experience with horses. Way back in 1907, when he was considered the world's finest four-in-hand driver, he drove in a command performance before the king and queen of England. For the past few decades he has contented himself with training blue ribbon winners—one after another.

Next time I had a chance to say a word to Frank on this morning I'm talking about, I took it into my head to josh him a little. I asked him if he thought he'd ever get to feeling old.

"Old?" he said, "only thing I can say right now is that I

I can say right now is that I don't get quite as much kick out of working as I used to forty years ago, I don't believe. But if you'll excuse me, young fellow, I've got a lot to do."

"FIRE KING"—This high stepping Hackney pony is owned by Toby Anguish, whose Valley stable is located at Vesper and Van Nuys boulevard, Pacoima. Anguish has in his stable the sire of "Fire King," the nationally known show Hackney, Reserve Champion of the U. S. for 1946, "Forest Fire."

One of the few Hackney and Shetland breeders in the United States is Toby Anguish of Pacoima. His trainer, Frank Winterbottom, is widely known for his success with the little horses. The outstanding Hackney in the barn is Forest Fire. This pony was reserve champion of the United States last year.
