Young integral part of Lyman

By RICK MYERS Of the Star-Herald

LYMAN — E.S. "Bud" Young walked briskly up the street past the Lyman High School on his way home from the senior citizen center where he regularly goes for lunch.

"I'm 'batching' it now and the lunches are pretty good on the days they serve them," he said. "I kind of like it there."

Young has been associated with Lyman since the community's inception back in 1921 when he opened a lumber and grain company on the north edge of the town.

YOUNG'S INVOLVEMENT in western Nebraska extends back past 1921 however, and his life could be considered a key part of the Valley's history.

Born April 23, 1889, on a farmstead five miles southwest of Gering, Young has spent nearly all his life in western Nebraska.

Much of his life after graduating from Scottsbluff High was spent working on the Tri-State Canal, one of the first major ventures in bringing irrigation to the Valley.

YOUNG HAS PILES of photographs he took while working on the project as a civil engineer.

"It (taking photos) wasn't my job, I just liked doing it," he said.

According to "Who's Who in Nebraska," Young also served as an engineer in the U.S. and Canada from 1909 to 1913 and as a ranch boss in 1915 for the Swan Land & Cattle Co. until 1917.

During World War I, Young served for 19 months in France with a field artillery division.

HE OPENED THE E.S. Young Lumber and Grain Co. in 1921.

"I figured that being an engineer, I could design a building or home, figure out the cost and sell the lumber." Young said.

lumber," Young said.
Young was active in the growth of Lyman serving on the board of trustees, the fire department, the chamber of commerce and numerous civic and professional organizations.

"When the factory (Great Western Sugar Co. plant) pulled out, it was a blow to the community," Young said. "They had quite a payroll and I think fewer beets were grown."

YOUNG TRAVELS by bus to Gering each Friday to visit his wife, Bess, at Northfield Villa and does some shopping while in town.

"She just couldn't take care of this big old house anymore," he said.

Young said his general good health, "except for losing my eyesight," for 90 years can be attributed to "bourbon whiskey and Campho Phenique (an antiseptic)."

SCOTTSBLUFF MAN ON THE TUSCANIA SAVED FROM DEATH

Anxiety as to the fate of Ernest (Bud) Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Young, of this city and who was among those on board the ill-fated Tuscania, was set to rest by the receipt of a cable from the young man assuring his parents that he was safe. This information was also confirmed in a later dispatch to Mr. Young from the war department. While there was no certain knowledge that Ernest was on the Tuscania, friends in this city had received postcards telling them of his expected sailing which would about coincide with that of the Tuscania.

It is presumed that the young man was going over on this boat as a casual officer, as he is a lieutenant of artillery and connected with the Wyoming troops, having enlisted from that state, and having been for some time quartered at the Presidio at San Francisco. He spent a few days here during the Christmas vacation, later, returning to 'Frisco, and being ordered to report for duty at Chicago. From that city he was transferred to the east and later not-ified his friends here that he would soon "be on his way."

His enlistment with the Wyoming troops was the result of his being for the past two years connected with the Swan Land & Cattle company with headquarters at Chugwater in the capacity of engineer, following some years of like service with Art Selzer in this city. His many friends are naturally jubilant to learn that he escaped injury or death and are awaiting with interest a first-hand account of the disaster which he will no doubt send when the time and opportunity arrives.

"Bud" Young in London.

Relatives in this city are in receipt of a cablegram from "Bud" Young, who was on the ill-fated Tuscania, that he has arrived safely in London and that he was purchasing equipment. This is supposed to mean that it will not be long until he is in the "center of things' 'along the western front.

LOCAL BOY WRITES ABOUT TUSCANIA

TO ALMOST MEET DEATH IN

A RAID

Over London By Germans Shortly After "Bud" Young Had Arrived In The English Capital

To escape the dangers of the Tuscania disaster, only to be almost wiped out of existance in a London air raid is the rather uncomfortable but exciting experiences of a Scottabluff boy, "Bud" Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Young, of this city. These circumstances are detailed in a letter received by Art Selzer, of this city. written by Lieutenant Young from London in the early part of February.

The lieutenant was a passenger on the Tuscania, crossing the water to join his command, and accompanying the other units on board the vessel, although a portion of an independent command. In describing the disaster which overtook the vessel, the lieutenant states that, in company with another lieutenant he was given command of the second boat that was attempted to be launched from the rapidly sinking steamer. Due to the inclination of the vessel's side the boat which he commanded, was partially wrecked in the launching, being almost swamped on reaching the water and considerable of the boat's equipment being lost.

In consequence the men found only one oar with which to havigate their small craft, but managed to get clear of the vessel before being completely crushed. While doing their best to get headway with the oar, they were lucky enough to find another, and this relieved matters somewhat, although they could not expect to make headway with such equipment. The best they could do, as would be inferred from the letter, was to keep her into the wind and allow the strong tide which occurs in that region, to take the boat where it willed.

When they were within only a half mile of the threatening Scottish coast lined with jagged rocks, they were picked up by a steamer, the skipper telling the two young men that in another half hour their craft would have been pounded to pieces.

After two days in Ireland, Lieutenant Young went on to London, and it was only shortly after his arrival that he was in the center of one of the German air raids upon the capital He stated that while he escaped injury, the sights he saw as the result of the bomb explosions were horrible in the extreme, and it is evident did not increase his love for the German baby butchers. When the letter was written Lieutenant Young was located in one of the London suburbs.

SCOTTSBLUFF BOY DESCRIBES THE SINKING OF TRANSPORT TUSCANIA

Lieutenant Young of Scottsbluff Tells of Many Exciting Events—Witnesses Air Raid in London by Bombing Planes of Huns

The following letter, from Lieutenant E. S. Young, a Scottsbluff boy who was on board the ill-fated Tuscania, which was torpedoed off the coast of Ireland last month, is hereby published through the courtesy of Art Selzer of this city, to whom the letter was written. Lieutenant Young is known to a large number of our readers, and his letter will no doubt be of interest to all:

> Winchester, Eng. Feb. 18, 1918.

Dear Art and bunch;

This is sure some life. I have really been having too good a time to write before. I was lucky, or unfortunate, enough in being aboard the Tuscania.

We left the States at 1 a. m. and I enjoyed about two weeks sea voyage, missing only one meal, that being breakfast, owing to the fact that I was too lazy to get up in time. Tuesday, 4 p. m., we saw the shore of Scotland, a hazy line of the piece "that fell from out the sky." I felt as safe as tho we had landed. I was playing checkers in the smoking room absolutely unconcerned. The game was near the finish. I had one king and my opponent three. Suddenly there was a terrific jar to announce my victory, for that old king jumped all three of his. Just a few seconds and we were in total darkargument as to who won the game.

men were in the boat floated under the stern of the Tuscania, and I proceeded to go down the rope to get it pushed out. We had only one oar, and using that we got out from under it. Two more men came down, then we were cut loose and, believe me, with the boat practically filled with water we had a load The men got busy and finally we were riding high with one oar. Fortunately the sea had some swell and was not choppy. We were lucky afterwards in picking up a second oar. Later the wind began to rise and we had some job to keep headed to the sea and out of the trough. There were several times when it was 50-50 whether we would be straight up or going ov-

The skipper that picked us up said we had drifted about nine miles and that we were only a half mile off the rocky Scottish coast. We were rather flirting with Eternity at times.

There were really a number of funny things we can laugh at now. We landed at -- and were treated royally. After being there a few days, we left Ireland, crossed the Irish sea and arrived here. Friday and Saturday I had two days' leave and went to London. We certainly had a wonderful time. Major Endicott, head of the American Red Cross, insisted that we go to a show, and of ness, and believe me, there was no course we, seven in all, accepted. A Mr. Graff paid all our expense at the The tables and chairs rattled and American Officers' Inn. It is surecreaked as some hasty lads bumped by some place. That evening when into them getting out. I made my way out the aft stairway and crowded corridor, came to my stateroom, where I proceeded to pull my sweater over my blouse, grab my overcoat, life preserver, hat and gloves. I took one good look at my camera- "O, hell, let her go down with the rest."—and it sure did.

From there the going was good for nearly everyone was out on deck and I was not long getting to my boat station, where another "shave tail" one boat and forty men. The first boat on the aft starboard side was hurriedly lowered and in the rush capsized and was lost. We were the about thirty minutes getting next one down, which was mine. They practically dropped it in, and tore the canvas out on one end and ripped it on the other. I started the enlisted men down the rope. One end of the about half full. When most of my crossing the English channel.

we returned for dinner our theatre tickets were there. We had a lower box at the Galety, and certainly enjoyed the play.

Yesterday we saw Westminster, the house of parliament, and the i tower of London. My only regrets a were that we were rushed for time.

We were making our way through the dark streets to the Waterloo station when, just my luck, no air raids having occurred for two weeks, I'll be damned if one didn't start in. It and myself were to take charge of was some sight. No one could ever realize what it is or the ungodly suffering until he actually goes through one or sees the results. But, as usual, this old tramp, a little after midnight, was strolling home without a scratch.

As ever counted when it came to training, It will be remembered by a number in this city that during the year of 1907-08 the high school cadets were organized, with J. W. Westervelt as captain, Bud Young as first lieutenant, and Ora Eatwell as second lieutenant. This company was supplied with uniforms and did regular army drill, and during the year or year and a half, they succeeded in getting quite proficient in the art of army tactics.

Companion of Lieut. Young Writes Concerning Sinking of the Tuscania

A. L. Selzer of this city is in receipt of a communication Lieut. Hodge, now at Cardiff, Wales. Lieut. Hodge is a stranger to this section of the country, but in some manner saw the account of the sinking of the Tuscania, as told in a letter to Mr. Selzezr and written by Lieut. E. F. (Bud) Young of this city. Mr. Hodge writes and that he is the man who was "playing checkers" with Bud when He was not so fortornedo struck. tunate as Mr. Young, however, for he was severely wounded and has been in a hospital in England almost all of the time since. Lieut. Hodge speaks very highly of Mr. Youg's ability as well as courage in the stress of sudden danger.

Continental Filling Station and Bud Young's Offices Are Entered.

NO LOOT IS SECURED; MEN NOT YET CAPTURED

Both Morrill and Lyman were visited early yesterday morning by robbers, and both crimes are believed to have been committed by the same men, two in number, who were seen at Morrill after they have completed their efforts there.

In Morrill, the Continental filling o station was entered by robbers, and st a small safe was blown open with a nitro-gycerin. The charge was in- w serted at the door of the safe, but in- th stead of blowing this off, the top of the safe gave way. A piece of auto- fe mobile spring was inserted at the top the of the safe, to pry with so that a hand in could be inserted. It was evident that ly he top could not be lifted sufficiently to to admit a hand, and it is believed that the men gave up the task in a short while and left town. The safe contained $27.30 in cash and a few checks, none of this being disturbed.

The station at Morrill is operated by J. F. Buehner. The Elton Garrett family, living just across the street from the filling station, heard the sound of the explosion, Mr. Garrett getting up just in time to see two men leaving the place.

Tracks found later by city and county officers indicated that the men walked some distance to where they had left their car parked, and from there went in the direction of Lyman.

Deputy Sheriff Guy Carlson called Is Lyman and gave a description of the men, one of whom was tall and the other rather short. It was said there that such a pair had been seen driving through and that they had turned south at the Braziel corner near Lyman. From that point no further trace as of them has been obtained.

MORRILL AND LYMAN ARE VISITED BY ROBBERS WEDNESDAY MORNING

Shortly after this the Lyman police officer was notified by Bud Young that his lumberyard office had been enn tered during the night. At this place the robbers broke the glass in the front door and gained entrance. The eash register drawer had been left. open when the money was removed Tuesday night, so the robbers found nothing. They slammed the drawer shut upon leaving. From all indications it is believed that the men first tried the Lyman place, and being unsuccessful there, drove on to Morrill. They then left their car parked some distance away and walked to the station. It is believed they feared the towns on the aighway would be notified, and thus it they started back to Lyman, probably intending to get on the Cheyenne highway by way of the Yoder road. Reaching the Braziel corner they b turned south instead of continuing on to Yoder. Officers everywhere in this section of the state are on the lookout for the men, having a fairly good description of both the men and the car they were n driving. It is believed that they will n be apprehended within a short time. (

Surely Zane Grey knew the intrinsic value as well as the romantic side of the little yellow grain-wheat, he appropriately named yellow gold. Because any novice in a wheat country has just to stand on the side lines of the scale platforms of either the Pioneer Produce or the E. S. Young Llumber company for a few minutes and he understands that to choose a better name for wheat would be hard. But aside from the romantic side of wheat it has still another interesting part after leaving the thresher and before entering the large roler mills of the city to be ground into flour. That is here where it leaves the farmer, is judged, or tested, weighed and loaded for its trip to the eastern markets. The loaded trucks in line one after the other pull up before the scales (in this case it was those of the E. S. "Bud" Young Lumber and Grain Co.) await their turn, then pull up on the scales, and say, 'How much you bid me on this Bud?' How much have you got? Forty acres. How's it run? Good. Oh, well let's see. Then he steps up and takes a handfull looks it through and says-a dollar-nine. You bought it. Where do you want it, car or elevator? Elevator. It's then weighed and taken to the elevator, where another man in charge of the elevator looks it over again and decides whether it shall go in bins for future delivery or directly into a car standing on the tracks beside the elevator.

In either case it is run over an automatic dumping platform, unloaded into a deep pit, carried by endless belt conveyors to the top of the elevator and diverted from that point from a control on the ground floor to either the waiting cars or bins.

E. S. "Bud" Young of Lyman Surviver of "Tuscania" Disaster Recalls Tale of Troop Ship Sunk By German U-Boat 77; Many Were Drowned

Fifteen years ago last Sunday afternoon, E. S. "Bud" Young, local lumber and grain dealer, was sitting in the saloon of the Tuscania, Brittish transport ship, playing checkers with a medical officer from Kentucky. The medico had three kings to "Bud's" two. "Bud" was in a jam. But a sudden maneuver brought Young a victory. And just as the game ended the Tuscania trembled under the impact of a torpedo directed by the German submarine, U-77.

On Feb uary 5, 1918 history records that the Tuscania, first American transport, Europe bound, to have been sunk by a submarine, was in the North Channel between Scotland and Ireland. She was carrying about 3,000 men, the majority of them Michigan and Wisconsin soldiers and a group of officers, mainly casuals. About six o'clock p. m. a German torpedo struck the Tuscania Three hours later she went down No men were on board her so far as is known but two hundred lost their lives when their boats were dashed against the coastal rocks by a rough sea.

would indicate. Mr. Young was lowered to one of the life boats within half an hour after the torpedo struck. The life boats stayed a few hundred yards away to avoid the undertow when the boat went down but in sight of the sinking ship, which went down shortly before nine o'clock as Young remembers. He was picked up by the Elf King, a British trawler, about 11 o'clock and taken to Larne in Ireland where he arrived at six o'clock in the morning. From there he went to Holyhead and then on to Winchester with others rescued from the Tuscania.

Young cabeled his parents at Scottsbluff that he had landed safely. He sent the cable from Ireland at eight o'clock in the morning and it was received at Scottsbluff at two in the afternoon just before the papers came out listing the names of the men on board the ill-fated ship, but not giving the casualties.

Mr. Young was one of four Nebraska men on board the ship when it was torpedoed. He was a casual officer in the artillery. Although he does not know the names of the others nor their locations, a special feature article in Sunday's Nebraska State Journal devotes a page to the Tuscania disaster as recalled by Harry P. Morgan said Fenner at first denied writing the check. Erwin testified to the bank account Fenner had at Lusk. Sheriff Hassed told of Fenner's arrest at the request of Scotts Bluff county authorities.

Fenner said in his own defense that he gave the check to a truck edriver named Herman Sealock. It was signed by Fenner, but the amount was not filled in, Fenner said. Fenner claimed Sealock, who could not be found to testify, was instructed to purchase gasoline with the check instead of oats.

Masonic Lodge Charter Issued in 1908 With 34 Names on List

Free Masonry's ancient ban against women was interpreted by the Nebraska grand lodge in 1907 to prevent the newly organized lodge at Scottsbluff from naming itself after Winter creek.

The objection, recalls Winfield Evans, charter member of the lodge, was that Winter creek was named after a woman, Rebecca Winters, the Mormon wife whose grave lies along the Mormon trail about four miles southeast of Scottsbluff.

When the charter was issued on June 10, 1908, therefore, it was to Robert W. Furnas lodge No. 265, the lodge having decided upon the name of a former Nebraska governor who was active in Masonic

Obituary of Bess Howard Young – "Scottsbluff (NE) Star-Herald" Tuesday 26 Feb 1980 p 8

On Wednesday morning Mrs. Bud Young gave a very interesting talk on her recent trip through South America. She told about the ruins of the Inca civilization and how the Spanish had built on the remains. One of the reasons that the Indians were so easily conquered by the Spanish was that they lived under rulers who told them exactly what to do. When the rulers were captured and killed it was a simple matter to control them.

One thing that Mrs. Young noticed especially was that people were either very rich or very poor. There was no middle class.

Paper is very scarce in Chile, although there is plenty of wood from which it could be made. No one will invest the money to develop the industry because they say the people are too poor to buy it.

One interesting custom is the drinking of mate, a tea made of pouring boiling water over a powder made from the leaves of a small tree.

She had pictures of the cowboys of Chile. They were different from the cowboys of America.

Another highlight of the trip was seeing President Eisenhower while he was in Buenos Aires. While there a bomb exploded and a building was blown up about a half block from where she was staying. It happened at night, but she slept through it all.

Coffee that is grown in Brazil is different from the coffee of Guatamala. She had a book-let with pictures showing how it is grown and handled.

Mrs. Young said a car in South America costs $14,000.

Besides Mrs. Capek's father, other charter members of Lyman's business district were George Braziel (garage), Bennie Quick and Lin McHenry (drug store), Dewey Smith, (cafe), Downar Brothers (general merchandise), Prohs Brothers (hardware, plumbing and undertaking), Charles Williams (contractor) and Bill Lyman (banker). E. S. (Bud) Young, a lumberman, is now dean of the Lyman businessmen.

Lyman's population now stands at about 625. It is the home of Couplamatic, which rules as the world's largest manufacturer of coupling machines and is about eighth in the manufacture of couplings. It makes over a 1,-000 different kinds of couplings. Last year it used over 11/2 million pounds of steel. The firm was started by M. O. (Marks) Morrison in 1959, Couplamatic sells its products all over the globe, and in the past 18 months has doubled its production. About 57 persons are employed by Couplamatic and its sister organization, OEM Suppliers.

Funeral services have not been arranged, but the rites probably will not be held before Monday.

Besides being one of the few original valley settlers, Mr. Young also was one of the early residents of Scottsbluff. The house in which he died had been his home since 1904.

Born Dec. 4, 1852, in Clayton county, Iowa, he was 86 years, six months and feur days of age at death. He married Mary Schumacher in Clayton county Dec. 20, 1879, and they moved to LeMars, Ia., in 1880. Four years later, in 1884, he filed on a homestead in Cedar valley, four miles southwest of Gering, and the following year moved to western Nebraska with his family.

WILL HIS TAIMINY.

He lived on the place until 1902, when the family moved to Scotts-bluff. He retired in 1910 and in 1912 went to Florida, where he resided for about 20 years before returning to Scottsbluff.

His wife, who died here Nov. 11, 1930, of injuries sustained several weeks earlier in an automobile accident near Marsland, had the distinction of being the first woman settler in Gering valley, moving there two years before the establishment of the town of Gering.

He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, nearly all his adult life, and at one time was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge.

Surviving him are three sons and three daughters, two sisters and 10 grandchildren.

His children are: George H. Young, Marsland; Leonard F.

Young, Cushing, Okla.; Mrs. Carrie M. Cosner, Scottsbluff; E. S. Young, Lyman; Mrs. Willimina Brown, Scottsbluff, and Mrs. Florence E. Gaines of St. Louis.
