With information still indefinite as to the Michigan men who may have been aboard the Tuscania when she was hit, several Lansing families were feared represented.

Lawrence Clay Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Merritt Hewitt, 132 Allen st., enlisted in the Lansing batteries shortly before they left here for Grayling. He was transferred while at Waco, Texas, to the 107th Engineers' Train which was on board. The last letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt from their son was postmarked New Jersey. He said equipment had been loaded and he was about to start "across." Hewitt has two brothers in service. One, Reed Hewitt, left The State Journal advertising staff a few weeks ago and went to Columbus Barracks to be equipped for service in the quartermaster's corps.

The engineer train is composed of men who are sent ahead of the engineers and do the heavy work preparatory to the building of railroads and establishing of camps.

Otto Cady, 114 North Larch st., it is believed, was on the ill-fated Tuscania as a member of No. 2 Sanitary squad, 32 division. With him was Robert G. Lee, nephew of Lewis L. Lee, 510 Anderson st. In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Omar Cady, dated Jan. 21, Private Cady told of his detachment preparations to sail and wondered if he would get seasick. He said:

"We load Tuesday and embark Wednesday morning. I do not know whether I will be seasick or not but I am willing to take any chance."

Private Cady was chosen with 54 picked men composing No. 2 sanitary squad to precede the 32nd division to make a thorough survey of the sanitary conditions, analysis of water and prepare the camp for the division. No. 2 squad members were all registered pharmacists.

When the first news of the disaster reached Lansing it was late in the night. Thursday morning as Mr. Cady went into the shop to work he heard of the sinking of the boat. Certain that it was the boat that carried his son, he hastened to his home to quell the fears of the boy's mother.

At the Cady home on Larch street a large service flag hangs in the front window indicating that a son from that home is in the service of the country. The flag seemed to speak a stronger language as the mother sought the information of her boy. The touch of German mendacity had settled on a Lansing home.

"I cannot help but think he was among the ones saved," said Mrs. Cady.

"We must expect that some of the boys will lose their lives," said the father, "that is what they enlisted for. Otto would not wait for the draft. If he had, I would have enlisted myself. He is my only child but I wish I had a dozen boys to face the dangers of this war."

The news that Michigan men were on the torpedoed transport Tuscania startled and shocked the state capital, although aside from the military authorities no one knew of the sinking until this morning.

When the complete list of units aboard the boat was given him the colonel said:

Bersey Explains Units.

"There may not be a Michigan man lost."

In explanation of this statement, Colonel Bersey said:

"The units from Camp MacArthur as well as I can figure them out are mostly Wisconsin men. The 107th military police, the 107th supply train and the 107th engineers' train, while all are attached indirectly to the 107th engineers, are mostly Wisconsin men.

"The aero squadron enumerated may contain some Michigan men, but it is impossible to tell from where. These squadrons are recruited from all over the country and I think the replacement detachments mentioned must also consist of aero men. If they are the replacement detachments of the Michigan-Wisconsin division they are from the depot brigade, which again is composed chiefly of Wisconsin men.

"The larger portion of the infantry in the 32nd division, I am sure, could not have been near the Irish coast and consequently could not have been in the accident."

Until further details including the list of those lost are received, it will be impossible to tell, according to Col. Bersey, whether there are any Michigan men among the missing or even on the boat. The 51 casual officers listed are, in the opinion of the officers at the capital, mostly regular army men, or reservists who have been called in and sent to France, possibly doctors.

Tuscania Survivor Dies of Heart Attack

Otto K. Cady, 51, of 4858 Justamere road, Delhi township, a survivor of the sinking of the Tuscania during the World war, died unexpectedly of a heart attack Friday evening at the home.

State police called in on the case said that Mr. Cady had complained of a pain in the chest while sitting at the dinner table and went into the bedroom where he lay down on the bed. A few minutes later he suffered an attack and never regained consciousness. Mr. Cady had been employed at the state laboratories. Coroner Ray Gorsline said death was due to a heart attack.

Mr. Cady was born in Dansville December 18, 1889, and for the past 25 years had resided in Lansing and vicinity. He served with the 119th Field Artillery in the World war for two years and was a member of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars. He was rescued when the troop ship Tuscania was torpedoed off the Irish coast, February 5, 1918. He is survived by the widow, Edith Ann Cady, two daughters, Shirley Jean and Mary Janet Cady; a son, James Cady, and the mother, Mrs. Ida Cady of Dansville. The body was removed to the Gorsline-Runciman funeral home to await funeral arrangements.

YOUNG MAN INVESTIGATES DE-

APPARATUS.

Otto Cady, a clerk at Jones & Houghton's drug store, Michigan ave and Cedar st, was severely burned about his neck and face late Thursday afternoon by the explosion of a gas tank which supplies a private lighting system at the store. Cady was removed to his room at Larch and Shiawassee sts in a serious condition. A fire which followed the explosion was extinguished before any damage was done.

About 4:30 Thursday afternoon Cady turned on the lights at the Jones & Houghton store. The place is illuminated by a patent system which manufactures its own gas. Cady noticed that something was wrong with the lights and found that the pressure from the tank, in a rear room, was too heavy. He lighted a match to investigate and when he opened a stop to let off some of the gas the match ignited it and the explosion followed. The fumes blazed up and badly burned Cady's face, neck and hands.

The fire department responded to an alarm that was turned in following the accident but the blaze was put out before the firemen arrived.

Lansing, Mich., October 29.—Otto Cady, 17 years old, investigated the condition of a private gasoline lighting plant in the rear of Jones & Houghton's drug store this evening. He struck a match to discover where the leak was. When he was picked up his face and hands were badly burned. The explosion called out the fire department, but little damage was done by fire.

THREE LANSING MEN ON BOARD

WILBUR CLARK, OTTO K. CADY AND GLENN F. DENNISON AMONG SOLDIERS ON TRANSPORT.

SCORES ARE FROM MICHIGAN

Detroit Journal Transmits Roster of Those Who Were on Cunard Liner Sunk in War Zone Tuesday Night.

By Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 8.—The Detroit Journal Friday received from its Washington correspondent a list of persons aboard the liner Tuscania. The list includes soldiers and civilians and does not designate the companies to which the men belonged. Eighteen men were from Detroit. The remainder of the list follows:

Lansing—Wilbur Clark, Otto K. Cady, Glenn F. Dennison.
Bay City—Ralph Story, Marshall J. Smith, sanitary squad;
Louis Chaltraw, sanitary squad; Barney Mienkwicz, sanitary squad;

Five Men on Tuscania Are Well Known in Lansing

Dispatches received today establish the fact that Otto Cady of Lansing was aboard the Tuscania when she went down, and gave the names of two additional men, Glenn F. Dennison and Wilbur Clark. They do not, however, bear out the belief of relatives of Clay Hewitt that he was on the ship. Further information indicates that Hewitt was in the engineer corps rather than the engineer train, members of which were on the Tuscania, as the family had believed.

In addition to the three men mentioned, W. R. Johnson, a former M. A. C. student, and Wesley Green of St. Johns, who enlisted in the Michigan artillery, were among those aboard who are well known in Lansing.

Efforts to locate relatives of Clark have been unavailing. Every Clark whose name appears in the city directory has been reached by The State Journal, but none of them know Wilbur Clark.

Dennison Was Reo Driver.

Glenn F. Dennison enlisted in Battery C, Michigan Field Artillery, in July, just before the Lansing battalion was called into federal service. His father, Isaiah Dennison, lives at 1423 Bailey st. Young Dennison was transferred at Waco to the 107th engineers expeditionary forces, being an expert chauffeur. Before enlisting in Battery C he was a truck driver at the Reo.

A card written to his father Jan.

Wesley G. Green of St. Johns enlisted in the medical detachment of the Lansing artillery battalion and was on the torpedoed transport. He was one of the 54 picked men going over in advance to prepare the camp for the 32nd division and a companion of Otto Cady also on the ill-fated boat.

Abner E. Larned, of Detroit, who is among those announced as safe among the survivors of the Tuscania disaster, is head of the Larned-Carter company, Detroit, and has conducted the big selling campaigns for the government, such as the Liberty Loan. He is a former president of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce.

Edward Fitzgerald, also reported safe, is secretary to Mayor Oscar Marx of Detroit and is on leave.

Cady is one of the most popular young men who has worked in Lansing drug stores in recent years. He always had a pleasant word to say, particularly to the girls. "He is one of the merriest kidders I ever knew," declared one of these girls. "When I used to go in the drug store to get something at the fountain he was always saying, 'just a minute and I will eat with you.' He never did. He was always too busy. All we girls liked to go into the store when he was there."

"He is a mighty fine young chap," said Col. Roy C. Vandercook, who knew Cady when he was a member of Battery A.

Otto Cady of Lansing is on the list of survivors of the Tuscania disaster.

Omar Cady, father of the Lansing soldier, was in the State Journal office Saturday afternoon when the list of men who escaped death began to arrive. In fact, Mr. Cady had spent much of his time since the first extra was issued as near the source of news of the men who were attacked before they had reached the firing line as he could get.

could get.
 "Wait," he was told, "and we may be able to give you good news." He stepped to the side of the telegraph operator and looked over his shoulder as the letters formed beneath the fingers. At that moment the name of "Otto Cady" was spelled out.

"I want to thank you, gentlemen," said the father with a tremor in his voice as he turned to the editors. "My boy is among the saved." Wiping tears of relief from his eyes he made his way hastily from the building to go with the news to the boy's mother, who has been ill since the first hours of suspense created by the loss of the Tuscania.

DENISON AND CADY WRITE TO PARENTS

Lansing Boys Aboard Tusin Ireland.

Otto Cady writes his parents from somewhere in Ireland giving his impressions of "the land of Shamrocks." Since receiving the letter the father, Omar Cady, received a cablegram announcing the arrival of his son in England. Cady was on the Tuscania when it was torpedoed. Cady's letter follows:

"Dear Folks:

"Thought perhaps you would like to know that I am very well and at present full of Irish food. I never received better treatment any place on earth than right here in Ireland. Of course, owing to the strict censorship on all mail, I cannot tell you very much other than you have already read in the papers.

"Had a nice exciting voyage for one of my somewhat timid nature but am safe and well among the best people on the globe. Sorry to tell you and my friends at home that my worldly possessions are minus. They are resting peacefully at the bottom of the deep blue sea. I can tell you nothing further.

"This Irish country is very pretty and I can truthfully say I never saw a more beautiful place in my life. Just visited a castle here built in 1616 by King John. I hope tomorrow to kiss the Blarney stone.

"Remember me to all the folks, with love,

OTTO."

Tells of Tuscania.

Otto Cady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Cady, who was on the Tuscania when she was torpedoed off the coast of Ireland was on the last boat to leave that ship. He has written two letters home which tell something of his experience and his impressions of England. Under date of Feb. 10 he writes:

Dear Folks—I will try and write to you again, but it will be very indefinite. Of course you read of the sinking of the Tuscania and all the things that happened and I probably cannot tell you anything but that you already know. I sent you a letter from Ireland, telling you I was safe, but you may not have received it. I saw all the interesting things of Ireland and the people treated us fine.

I was on the last boat off the Tuscania so I saw a lot of horrible sights that I do not think I will forget. I was taken to shore on a sub-chaser and landed about 3 a. m. on the north of Ireland coast. English troops stationed there gave us plenty of hot food and tea, also cigarettes, which are as welcome to us as food. The Irish people also gave us clothes and also money to buy a few towels and some pieces of soap.

My entire equipment was on board, only my overcoat and a hat being saved, so I was not in a very good financial condition, but we should worry about that as I am still alive.

I think if the American people were brought in closer contact with some of the incidents that they would view the war in a far more serious light than they now do, but I suppose time alone will bring that about.

We are going to be fully outfitted here, so do not think I am destitute as I am far from that and aside from the personal losses I am as well as ever.

You might send me some good old Durham and some papers when you receive this, not a large package but send them weekly. Start one off every Monday as they do the French and English soldiers, and while some of them are bound to be lost, I hope they do not sink all of them. Candy and cigarettes are the spice of life here, so here is hoping they come through safely. Mail them in a wooden box if possible to make them less liable to theft.

I will write again next week so will start this along to you.

are only looking for our three squares a day and the Valentines can go plumb.

We are feeding under the British army mess and they certainly do feed. Of course horse-flesh or "gee-gee" as the Tommies call it, is sometimes a part of our ration, but it is similar to veal so it tastes as good as any other meat to us. Tea and jam are also very important parts of the mess and the only real hardship is that of sugar. We get it in limited quantities and are rapidly learning to do without that before the war luxury.

Ambassador Page and General Bliss came down from London yesterday and gave us the once over and the glad hand, so I suppose we are formally welcomed to the "big time."

The climate is very mild for February and it seems more like April in the states. The farmers are plowing and some are threshing their harvest, so one wonders just where he is at times as the seasons seem to be reversed to ours at home.

The Y. M. C. A. is the real place for the soldier over here, and but for them it would be a rather dull place. We have vaudeville and boxing each evening also hot cocoa and cigarets. They sell us everything at practically cost to them so I am sure strong for them as are all the fellows.

Under date of Feb. 14 he wrote:
Dear Folks at Home—I am not sure how many of these letters reach you as the subs are quite active at present, and some of the mail goes down instead of to the States.

We are still "Somewhere in England," and having a period of rest which is real satisfying after the incident of the Tuscania. I have a few memoirs of the Tuscania which I would like to send you but I think they are safer here than in transit.

Today is Valentine day, but we for them as are all the fellows.

There are several historical spots in this county, but cannot mention them, as it would disclose our camp. A large cathedral and the famous round table of King Arthur are in this town as well as many other sights of interest.

I am going to request again the weekly package of Bull Durham and papers as it costs about 25 cents per sack here. Send about six sacks and a package of papers each week or two and be sure and mail them in a small wooden box to insure their safe arrival here. Some weeks they will probably get subbed, so the weekly schedule will certainly get some of them to me. Am feeling fine and sure have that wonderful appetite which would tax the utmost endeavors of the ordinary chef.

Tuscania Survivors Feted.

With his last letter home, Otto Cady encloses a clipping from a Southampton paper telling of the reception to American troops from the Tuscania. He writes:

IN ENGLAND, Feb. 21.

Dear Folks: Again I shall send my weekly letter, which I trust you will get sometime. As it takes nearly a month for a letter to make the trip and as sometimes an accident happens to them, as it did to mine, I hope you won't complain of irregular correspondence. I have not received any of your letters yet and probably will not until I get over to France, which will be within a week from now. I sent you a cable today which you will get about the twenty-fifth.

I received some clothes and shoes yesterday so I am feeling better than I did before and can dress up and go down town without looking like a ship-wrecked sailor. The people of Southampton gave us a big time yesterday. They paid our railway fare down to their city and gave us a big reception, also a fine vaudeville show. The lord mayor received us and the cigarets were passed around and for about three hours we had a regular American good time. All the acts at the show were made in America and I met some of the actors after the show. Some of them were from Chicago and had played at the Bijou so it was like meeting old friends.

The people here look on the war as a matter of course and while nearly every home has lost a member they are optimistic and seem to think that it is nearly won. A little of the English spirit would make a different country of the United States.

The weather here is warm and you can gather wood violets along any country lane. Wish you could see this country, it is wonderful this time of the year.

Must go to mess now and will mail this on the way over. Hope you are all well and don't worry about me. I am fine and enjoying life. Write to me each week and tell me everything for you can write more than I am allowed to. As ever,

OTTO.

Young Cady sent back the following report from a Southampton paper of the reception given the American soldiers there:

Feb. 20, 1918.

Heralded by flourishes of gay marching music and the intermittent rolling beat of drums, the American troops saved from the torpedoed transport Tuscania proudly passed through the streets of Southampton today.

Their route lay through the busiest thoroughfare of the town, and these were thronged with people full of eagerness to give a sign of that sense of warm fellowship which undoubtedly now exists between the children of the old world and the new.

No one thought of the rain that so unsympathetically fell—in fact, women who carried umbrellas shut them up with excited suddenness, dreading lest their view or anybody else's should be obscured.

They looked a fine type of men these ambassadors of victory. Tall and trim with faces as ruddy as the winter sun, they marched along with a sort of debonair self-assurance, as who should say, "What we've passed through was just a picnic, we guess!"

Everyone commented on their garb. It was a curiously haphazard assortment of American, English, and Scotch uniforms.

Not half a dozen among the men boasted a U. S. hat—there was the stock, circular khaki headpiece of the English "Tommy," there was the khaki "forage" cap, and one great fellow proudly sported even a very Scotch "Tammy."

As for the rest of their clothing, it was a "make-up" of tunics and belted coats, in which it is certain no citizen of the United States of America has ever walked abroad.

Here and there a merry-eyed trooper had a snug-looking Balaclava helmet, pulled down over his ears.

"And how's this for a night-cap?" he grinned to a bevy of laughing shopgirls on the step of their shop.

Handkerchiefs and hands waved everywhere, and many a "Tommy" came to salute as the procession passed by.

"Here's to you Sammy!" cheerily called a discharged hero from the pavement. He was leaning on crutches, but none the less he contrived to wave his cap in the air.

A venerable visaged old sandwich board man, stirred by the blare of the bugles, flung down his burden, and tearing off his greasy hat shouted, "Bravo, me boys—bravo!"

Their ranks, as they followed the smart young cadets of the King Edward VI. Grammar School and the Rifle Brigade band, wore one long easy-hearted smile. Now and again a long laugh began at the rear of the column, and danced down from man to man to those who led the van.

The officers, too, seemed delighted at their reception, and laughed with their men.

How curious were the eyes that looked up at the old Bargate as the procession swung through! How many of the men ever dreamed that their nation's history had many an initial link with the stolid old pile? That, in fact, the Pilgrim Fathers once deliberated within its walls,

Thinks England Beautiful and Climate Fine.

A letter received from Walter A. Kreuger, Battery B, 119th U. S. F. A., by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kreuger, 516 North Pine st., says:

March 8, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father:

Just a few lines so you will know we arrived safely "somewhere in England." I am in the best of health and hope you are all the same. The trip across was a pleasant one. Some of the fellows were a little sick, but I was healthy and happy all the way across the water. England sure is a fine country. The fields and everything look so pretty.

Clarence Kopkau and I took a little walk yesterday afternoon. The scenery was beautiful; the land and everything being kept so clean. I haven't seen a frame house as long as we have been here. Everything is brick and concrete.

I am over at the Y. M. C. A. at present. They have special hours that they keep open. I am always there when the time comes, for it is a good place to go and they are certainly doing a lot of good work.

I was talking with Otto Cady the other day. He was on the Tuscania that was torpedoed. He had a very thrilling experience to tell, but is well and happy and was glad to see us fellows from Lansing when we got here.

I can't think of anything to write, for you know the things you want to write about you can't so will close for this time.

Your loving son,

WALTER A. KREUGER.

Otto Cady Letter Shows Batteries Have Been in Alsace Since May 24

Keep This Card
S. S. Tuscania
No. 575
Yours Quarters Are in
No. 3 ..... Lower Deck

This is a copy of the card assigning Otto Cady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Cady, 114 North Larch st., to quarters while on the Tuscania, the U. S. transport which was sunk by a German submarine near the Irish coast February 5.

The card was enclosed in a letter which has just been received from Cady by his parents. Across its back is written: "This was not good after 5:45 p. m., Feb. 5, 1918." This was the hour the ship was torpedoed.

The letter was received co-incident with the announcement of the war department that the thirty-second division was in Alsace, near the Swiss border. It shows as far as censorship permits the location and is rich in description of the life seen and lived by the men of the thirty-second division, of which the Lansing artillery battalion is a part.

The letter follows: "No doubt it has been some time since you heard from me as I last wrote on the 12th of May, when I was preparing to move. We are hunting big game be there.

"I am wearing a branard (Red Cross) on my arm so I am supposed to be immune from harm. But as an extra precaution, I pack a Colt's 45 in my shirt which I think is a far better protection than a strip of cloth with a cross on it. We must wear, or rather carry, two gas masks at all times and wear one steel helmet. So we are all set for a sudden attack of either gas or shrapnel and one can never tell what is going to come next over here.

"I am sorry that I cannot tell you my present location but when I tell you that French is not spoken in this country you may perhaps have an idea what country I am in.

"Also on the way over here our truck got on the wrong road and I was over the boundary line into Switzerland. So I am seeing a lot of country at a dollar a day.

"OTTO."

The letter was dated May 24.

now and I am sure the men realize that war is not all drill and play for we have intermittent bombardment day and night, also the side portrayed by the airplanes which are very interesting to us 'rookies'.

"We can step outside our barrack doors and view the lines and 'No Man's Land' with the naked eye, so you can well imagine that we are not in any quiet zone. One captain came out of the line the other night and when he returned in the morning the house he had his office in was nowhere to be seen as Jerry had located it with a bit of high explosive and had spread it out to winds.

"I saw the first signs of spring the other day when passing a farm house. On the side of the barn was a large poster of 'Buffalo Bill's Wild West' show. It was several years old and was printed in a mixture of French and German but nevertheless it was sure something that was 'made in America' and was mighty good to see.

"Those clippings from The State Journal sure are welcome and do not forget to send them along when possible.

"The quartermaster corps truck was along this morning and I brought several articles. They are much cheaper here than they would be there.

WRITES 119TH IS IN BATTLE

OTTO CADY STATIONED NEAR MICHIGAN UNITS.

M'CULLOUGH IN ALSACE

Survivor of Tuscania Writes Interesting Letter From Front.

"The 119th is scattered about here and doing good work," Otto Cady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Cady, North Larch st., writes from Alsace. That the regiment, which includes the Lansing artillery battalion, is in the smoke of battle and is dropping explosives in the German towns back of the trenches is indicated in the letter.

Cady, who was aboard the torpedoed Tuscania, has met many Michiganders in his sector, including Major J. Chas. McCullough of this city and men of the old Bay City ambulance company, whom Cady knew during a former enlistment in the Michigan National Guard.

The Michigan National Guard.

The letter, of particular interest to Lansing people, follows:

"(Somewhere) May 31.

"Mon Cher Pere et Mere:

"Our dispatch rider was through today and left me five letters, of which two were from you, dated April 29th, and May 2nd. As I had just tipped a bottle of ink on my blankets, the letter lessened a flow of blue words usually found in the vicinity of spilled ink.

"The weather is the only available topic that is allowed to be explained thoroughly in our letters so I will hasten to enlighten you as to sunny France, or rather the country immediately west of it, but for the time being in the possession of the Allies. We are enjoying a sun light that nearly equals that of Texas, but the breeze from the snow clad Alps tends to neutralize the heat and so I am perfectly safe in saying that even Michigan is not to be compared as to weather conditions. Our nights are quite cold however and our two blankets, and those we can steal from the other fellows are none too many.

"The 119th is distributed around this sector and are doing good work, but I find that their 75's at times disturb my slumber. We sleep at all times while on this tour, and the usual routine is to sleep during the day and make all movements at night and I am doubling up, and sleeping night and day or at least trying to do so. We still see many air battles but the novelty is losing its interest and it takes a very violent bombardment to awaken the fellows enough to do any thing more than damn the Boche and his guns.

"I have spent several nights with the French artillery near here. They shoot the 155, or in our language, the six-inch guns and are located on hill tops in dugouts. They sure have great sport bombing and shelling the towns and fortifications on the other lines. I expect to be down and see the 119th tomorrow, so I may be able to tell you some things in my next letters about the fellows from home.

"I saw a thrilling sight one morning last week which was just an example of the average American soldier. It was down in the line trenches, and a patrol went over to a dugout to see if it was occupied. A sergeant pulled his "gat" and with profuse profanity chased six Germans out in the barbed wire of No Man's Land. His gun was empty and he had three bullets in his body. He is at present in a base, somewhere back of the lines, with a French Croix de Guerre on his breast. What do you think of that, for a little one hundred and thirty pound American?"

"This is only one of the many little incidents that happen every day, but it will give you an idea of what the fellows are doing. One day the Boche shelled a little town where our troops are stationed and 37 shells dropped and only 10 exploded. The officers had to drive the fellows away from the unexploded shells, as every man wanted to take the shells apart to see what made them explode.

"I hope those Lansing papers get here soon as reading matter is not to be found around here and you know one cannot sleep all the time so a paper or book is very welcome. We got an issue of tobacco twice a week and that with my former stock of Bull from home keeps me well supplied.

"Dr. Woodlock is stationed near us with the old Bay City Ambulance Co., and I see him quite often as he covers part of our sector in his work. Major McCullough is in our town at present but as the troops are constantly changing, he no doubt will only remain a week or two, and then some new regiment will come in to get their baptism of fire. We are on the only enemy country that is occupied by the allied army, so you can imagine how the natives feel towards us. They accuse us of stealing their chickens and soak us to the amount to about 84 cents a dozen for eggs. Of course we would not dream of stealing the chickens as a soldier would not be guilty of such a "fowl" act.

"The Harper Unit No. 36 is stationed at a base, somewhere to our rear, but on French territory, so I no doubt will not be able to see any of the Lansing men who are a part of it.

"Otto."

Cady Back From Front.

After taking part in a big drive, Otto K. Cady, writes home that he is now stationed at Tonnerre, France, in a "bomb proof" district where he has located a pool table and numerous other luxuries:

"Well we have just finished a big drive and pulled out of the lines this morning. I received a small shot of gas, but it is rapidly leaving me, so I am feeling fine again, with the exception of a large assortment of cooties and being extremely dirty. I volunteered for dispatch riding and I was in the saddle for practically five days and nights so I am a bit tired but am not shot up as yet. It is great sport as one is constantly wondering when a shell is coming over with your own address on it. Sort of a gambling proposition you know.

"At last I am in a bomb proof district, where I can sleep at night without putting on a gas mask every time a plane or shell comes over. I should have written before, as I have been here a week, but I did not know exactly what my address was to be, so I waited until I was able to tell you. Naturally being removed from the division I have not received any mail and so answer any of your questions which I know your letters always contain. We have a real billet in this town and cafes where we can buy feeds that we have not been able to get while on the line. I enjoyed the excitement of the front very much and am glad I was there, but you may be sure I am myself also glad to get back where there is rest to be had.

I have rid myself of the biggest bunch of cooties that one person ever accumulated. They were life size and had fangs that sure could bite but I think I've lost them all.

"DeVere Cleland was in the line when I left and I suppose that he is still there or perhaps by this time he is out, as his outfit was transferred at the same time that we were. I have located a billiard table here and each evening I have a real old regular time playing the game.

"It seems too good to be true to be here in this quiet place, and having a light at night, and all the comforts that we used to have.

"My cotton suit is fine just now as we are having very warm weather and besides I lost or threw away my other uniforms. I was so dirty that it was cheaper to get new ones than to try and clean up the old ones. We have a good bath house with plenty of hot water here so I hope we stay in this vicinity or at least in a place similar to this. Of course we do not know just where we will be, so that accounts for the present address.

"I will write again when I know more about our fate and tell you in detail about my work. I think we will stay in the S. O. S. (Service of Supplies) and that means no more of the front, which I suppose will please you. Am feeling great and eating as much as I can get. Keep well and write as usual, even if I do not get it on time."

do not get it on time.
A brief note accompanied the letter. It was prefaced—"This is not a sermon" and follows:

"It is 8 p. m. and I am just finishing this letter, and one of our bands is here playing for us. They are playing some martial air accented by the incessant roar of our "big boys" who are pretty close to us. The planes are circling around very low over Roosevelt's grave, which is just at the bottom of the hill where we are now located. We all expect our nightly barrage, but the men are having one big time tonight, and if you could see them you would sure wonder what they are made of, for if boys ever became men over night this is the time and place where they are coming across with the goods, and all of this bunch is from Michigan, and it sure makes a fellow feel that it is good too, with that sort of men. Good night."

OTTO CADY TO BOX ON JACKSON CARD

Meets Esau of Port Huron in Semi-Windup of Cen- tral City A. C.

Otto Cady, perhaps the most ambitious battler Lansing has boasted of since the day of Kid Prendergast, is slated to meet Whirlwind Esau of Port Huron at the Central City A. C. of Jackson next Monday night in the semi-final over eight rounds.

Cady's career, while nothing remarkable clearly shows the Lansing feather has given his best to the ring and has continually striven upwards, until today he is a fairly consistent battler. It is possible, Cady will never rise to greater heights than those he has already attained but nevertheless, his efforts are respected by every fan in Lansing and there is never a place where he has boxed but what he has made friends by his aggressive tactics in the ring.

His opponent, dubbed Whirlwind, is a comer, fast, yet still too green for opponents or reputation. Esau's chief asset is speed, combined with real hitting power. Despite the big boost given him by sport writers in town where he has appeared, Lansing fandom is confidently looking forward to a victory for Cady.

SERVICES HELD FOR WAR HERO

SERGT. ARTHUR M'LEAN IS BURIED MONDAY.

One of the largest military funerals, honoring the memory of a man who gave his life during the World War, held in Lansing since bodies started to arrive from overseas, was held at the Prudden auditorium for Sergeant Arthur McLean Monday afternoon.

The body arrived last Friday afternoon. Service yesterday started at 2 p. m., in charge of the Maurice Dixon post of the American Legion. The popularity of the man and the attendance of an unusually large delegation of American Legion men, combined to make the attendance figure at the service very large.

The following men, members of Sergeant McLean's overseas section, came from Battle Creek to serve as pallbearers: Carleton Genebacke, Joseph Boos, Earl Phillips, Willard Shouldice and LaVerne Weickgenant, Harry Hazzard, of Jackson, a former Lansingite, served with the Battle Creek men.

Creek men.

Remarks were made by Rev. Edwin Bishop, who reviewed the military life of Sergeant McLean through training in this country, service in Italy, experiences as an ambulance driver through the major drives in France, and finally his service and illness while a member of the occupational army across the Rhine.

The services were turned back to the American Legion. At the Mt. Hope cemetery, the customary military burial ritual was directed by a uniformed detachment of the Legion.

Sergeant McLean was a member of Section 601, U. S. A. S. He enlisted in the unit at Battle Creek a few months after this country severed diplomatic relations with Germany. With him on the trip to enlist at the Food City were Otto Cady, who was rescued from the Tuscania, and Frank Esselstyn, who was killed in service overseas.

Sergeant McLean, previous to his enlistment, was cashier of the Michigan Commercial insurance company here. He was born at Pewamo but came to Lansing while but a boy.

Ivan Swift, commander of the American Legion in this city, and Joseph Lewis, a major of the 119th F. A., are brother-in-laws of the ambulance man. Sergeant McLean's parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McLean, residing at 1214 W. Washtenaw st.

Several other accidents over the week-end were reported to the police. W. C. Page, St. Johns, drove his car into another machine owned by Alton Meredith, 1718 New York ave., late Saturday afternoon on Isbell st. The autos were slightly damaged. A car driven by Otto Cady struck another machine Sunday on S. Washington ave. The second car, owned by J. G. Koons, sustained a bent bumper.

BUDDY POPPY SALE SET FOR MAY 24-25

Veterans of Foreign Wars Make Plans for Annual Event Wednesday

Plans for the 14th annual sale of Veterans of Foreign Wars "Buddy" poppies were completed at a meeting of the local committee held Wednesday evening. The sale of "Buddy" poppies in Lansing will be sponsored by Morley S. Oates Post No. 701, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and will be held Friday and Saturday, May 24 and 25.

The local sale of the poppies will be in charge of the following committee appointed by A. J. Sepanek, commander of the Morley S. Oates post: Leon Royce, chairman; A. P. Gross, Merle E. Hopper, Don Stevens, Ray Buhl, Ray Trout, Otto Cady, Earl Nihart, Jerry Allen, Carl Heath, A. D. Urquhart, Malcom Milks, Christie Braun, Roy Wheeler, Lloyd Hanel, Harold Shaw, Al Zielinski, and Charles Bellows. Headquarters for the sale this year will be located at 232½ South Washington avenue, under Hurd's Clothing store.

The distribution of "Buddie" poppies is an annual event in Lansing and is held in conjunction with similar sales conducted by approximately 3,000 other V. F. W. posts throughout the country. Proceeds from the sale are used for maintenance and expansion of the Veterans of Foreign Wars' national home at Eaton Rapids, and for service and liaison work to local veterans in need of hospitalization or other aid.

The poppies are made at the United States Marine hospital at Detroit by disabled veterans. By providing for the manufacture of the silk poppies by disabled veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars has made a definite and valuable contribution to the hospital treatment of veterans suffering from nervous or mental disorders and also enables the disabled veterans to earn money which would be impossible for them to do in any other way.

U. S. LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS SOUGHT

Federal Investigators Here to Make Exhaustive Check of Retail Dealers

Four investigators and one junior inspector of the retail division of the United States alcohol taxation unit of the federal treasury department, were here Friday to check on every retail beer, liquor, and wine dealer within an approximate 50-mile radius of this city, as to the payment of federal liquor taxes.

Their quarters, established at Room 218 in the new federal building, filled the last available space in that building. The investigators are quartered in a small room originally designed as a storage space. Their requisition for furniture will be filled later, and their present equipment is inadequate and temporary.

I. G. Webster, Ann Arbor, junior inspector of the alcohol taxation unit, in charge of the local office, said that while Lansing is the only city of less than 100,000 population in this part of the country into which a squad of investigators is being sent, this does not signify a belief in Washington that violations of tax regulations are outstanding here.

"There are 16 technical violations which any liquor dealer might commit without any intention to do so," said Webster. "These investigators, trained for their work, will advise dealers on these matters, and visit them two or three times if necessary to check up later."

The four investigators are all from Lansing, selected from a list of 10 or 12 names submitted to federal authorities. They are: Clay K. Smith, 1301 Ohio street; Otto K. Cady, 1927 Benjamin drive; Murnie A. Hardy, 411 Spring street, and Donald M. McNeill, 2315 Kensington road.

Webster will remain in Lansing for about 10 days, to be succeeded by another junior inspector who will continue to supervise the investigators, one of whom, a month or so later, will be designated as group leader in nominal charge of the office, subject to supervision from Detroit headquarters of the liquor tax unit.

The group will be employed until next November and possibly until the end of the next fiscal year, July 1, 1937. Battle Creek, Alma and Jackson are included in the territory covered by the Lansing office.

The purpose of the inspection program is to secure uniform observance of all federal laws and regulations which have been issued for the protection of the government's revenue, as well as for the protection of the liquor dealer and the liquor consumer, it is said.

Wayside Pickups

By EARLE R. PITT

LANSING has a ghost theater, a shadowy, spectral playhouse in which no actors perform and no audience applauds or hisses.

Ghosts of ancient "hams," however, may caper their histrionic stuff on dust-covered stage, spout the old lines and die the death of ye old stage villain. But nobody hears them and nobody sees these specters of Lansing's away back days.

Otto K. Cady, once a useful pharmacist, but now with the federal government's revenue service, has actually been in this old theater, but admits he saw no ghosts—nor heard their histrionic rantings.

Some years ago Mr. Cady was assisting in a local property survey for the purpose of gathering data for appraisals. The survey took him into many strange and out of the way places, into junk-crammed attics and spider web-festooned basements.

Right in the heart of the downtown shopping district, Mr. Cady found the ghost theater. He inspected a local movie house and this inspection led him to the floor above the theater. To get to this floor he had to crawl through a small opening in the ceiling above the operator's machine.

Crawling through this hole—one had to be of slender build to accomplish it—Mr. Cady turned on his flashlight. Here in utter darkness was a theater atop a theater. The old gallery where the low priced tickets "sat" is still there. The old stage, even some of the back drops, were there.

were there.

Dust and more dust everywhere and, mingled with the dust, now and then an ancient show bill. And so in Lansing's ghost theater the specters of the long ago villain and the hero and the heroines may be speaking their lines and making their impassioned gestures, while the ghostlike personalities of the screen go through their stuff in the little theater below. Who knows?

Mr. Cady's ghost theater is probably some part of the old Star or Meade theater which, 70 years ago, was the town's chief theatrical amusement.

Two Injured In Separate Accidents

Two women were injured Tuesday in separate motor vehicle accidents in Bangor, both involving car-truck collisions.

Patrolman Bernard Mitchell, who investigated both collisions, said that they occurred at 8:17 a.m. at the intersection of Fourteenth Street Extension and Valley Avenue and at 1:50 p.m. at the intersection of Third and Cedar Streets.

Mrs. Edith Overlock, 55, Hermon, is under treatment at St. Joseph Hospital for multiple injuries sustained Tuesday morning in a collision at the intersection of Fourteenth Street Extension and Valley Avenue. Her condition Tuesday evening was termed "critical."

Patrolman Mitchell, said that Mrs. Overlock was the operator of a sedan which collided with a van truck operated by James N. Remick, 23, Bangor.

Remick told police that he was proceeding up the steep grade on Fourteenth Street Extension when the other vehicle came out of Valley Avenue. Both vehicles were demolished.

Also under treatment at St. Joseph Hospital are two of the five passengers in the Overlock vehicle. Janice Overlock, 32, and Brian Batchelder, 4, both of Hermon, were said to be in satisfactory condition.

Others treated at the hospital and released were Brenda Overlock, 27, Pamela Overlock, 14, and Andrew Overlock, 4, all of Hermon.

Remick also was treated at the hospital for minor bruises and was released later in the day.

Mrs. Shirley Sypher, 45, Brooklin, is under treatment at the Eastern Maine General Hospital for facial lacerations and a broken collarbone sustained in the collision at Third and Cedar Streets.

Police said that she was the operator of a sedan traveling south on Third Street. It collided with a pickup truck operated by George Simpson, 42, Bangor, proceeding west on Cedar Street.

Simpson sustained minor injuries in the mishap but did not require hospitalization.

Faulty Tail Light Leads to Arrest

College Student Also Found Without Driver's License

A Central Michigan College of Education student, who lives at R. 1, East Lansing, Saturday was in the Ingham county jail because the tail light on his car didn't work.

Police said he admitted his license had been revoked at Mt. Pleasant, where he goes to college, for a traffic violation there.

Justice Henry Schram heard a plea of guilty Friday to the charge of driving on a revoked license and sentenced him to four days in the county jail, plus $3.35 court costs.

Mary Cady Paladino

October 14, 1931 - August 13, 2016

Mary was born in Chicago in 1931 to Edith and Otto Cady, and grew up in the tiny town of Sutton's Bay, Michigan. An adventurer, activist and artist at heart, it wasn't long before the Big Apple called to her and she moved to New York City, where she enjoyed the bohemian lifestyle of Greenwich Village and became part of a professional dance troupe, performing ballet and modern dance on the stage. Mary worked her way through college in the 1950's, waiting tables, working in factories, and even doing a stint as a runway model to pay her tuition, and obtained a degree in Philosophy despite the prevailing opinion of the time that women belonged at home.

After college Mary traveled Europe and lived in Germany, where she hiked in the Alps and learned to speak German. Upon returning to New York, Mary completed a graduate degree in Clinical Social Work, and began her career in social work and mental health care. While still in grad school, she met and married Rocco Paladino, and together they had three beautiful daughters and moved to Oregon to pursue the dream of a better quality of life for their children. Although they later divorced, Mary continued to live in Oregon for forty-five years and loved every minute of it.

Mary worked as a therapist in private practice in Salem, Oregon for decades, and thrived on helping thousands of people to live happier, healthier lives. Mary was an impassioned activist for social justice for her entire adult life, beginning in high school and continuing through her very last days. She was active in the Socialist Party in college, agitated for civil rights during the 1960's, supported Green Party and other progressive candidates, worked to end poverty, supported women's right to reproductive freedom, educated youth about options to military service, registered disenfranchised voters, and was an anti-war activist who spoke out vigorously against every war during her lifetime. Mary could often be seen at political rallies, sit-ins and vigils, marching, inventing and singing catchy political poems, songs and jingles, carrying signs, performing political theatre under the moniker of "Raging Dove," and missing no opportunity to have fun while being a courageous and persistent voice for progressive social change.

Mary was gifted with endless intellectual curiosity and a love of learning that continued throughout her life, in addition to creativity and a fabulous sense of humor. She was an avid reader, writer and artist who delighted in writing poetry, fiction, non-fiction, opinion pieces and letters to the editor, enjoyed creative pursuits such as theatre, painting, and sewing, and continued to dance all of her life. At 80 years old Mary began performing onstage to sold out audiences in the annual community production of "The Vagina Monologues," inspiring women both young and old.

Women both young and old.

Despite living through the substantial political and social upheavals of her time, Mary remained filled with hope, optimism and enthusiasm throughout her long life. In the recent months before her passing Mary was greatly energized and inspired by the campaign of Bernie Sanders, worked hard for his candidacy, and was thrilled to see the Democratic Party adopt much of Bernie's progressive platform.

Mary loved the natural splendor of Oregon, and drew renewed energy from time spent outdoors, hiking, camping, going on long walks, and appreciating wilderness and wildlife. A talented athlete and long distance runner for many years, she won numerous awards for her athletic achievements. Kind and generous to a fault, she adored spending time with her loved ones, and treated every day of life as a precious gift.

Mary was a brilliant, strong, spirited woman with a huge and joyful heart, who greatly valued her independence, worked tirelessly every day of her long, happy life to make the world a better place, and was consistently a beacon of positive energy, love and light to those around her. Mary passed from this world on August 13th, 2016 on a bright, clear morning surrounded by family and loved ones, and at the moment of her passing a vivid rainbow filled the sky to let us know that while Mary's body could no longer carry on, her boundless energy and love will continue to grace this world.

Mary will be greatly missed by her children, grandchildren, friends, and loved ones. She is survived by her loving daughters Maria, Joanna, and Christina Paladino, their partners Jess, Jeremy, and Fred; granddaughter Leah Child and her partner Cameron, grandchildren Nicholas Child and Mia Donald-Paladino, and all of the thousands of others whose lives she touched and transformed. A celebration of life will be held at the Wesley Center, 2520 Harris Street, Eugene, Oregon on October 8th from 3-6 pm. For more information and to share photos and memories of Mary, you may also join the Facebook group Mary Paladino's Celebration of Life, or send email to maryp.celebrationoflife@gmail.com.
