BROOKLYN BOYS TELL FIRST REAL STORY OF TUSCANIA'S SINKING

Letters Home Thrill With Hair-Raising Experiences Following U-Boat Attack.

COOL HEADS IN CATASTROPHE

Corporal Frederick Lampe's sister Florence sat in the parlor of the beautiful Lampe home at 1290 President street last evening and with a great deal of pride in her voice read to an Eagle reporter Fred's graphic description of the sinking of the Anchor liner Tuscania, torpedoed on February 5, off the Irish coast. To the young woman the fact that her brother had escaped the hungry maw of the sea and behaved as a Lampe should behave was the big thing to her. From a news point of view the big thing about that letter was that it was the first detailed description of the sinking, written by a survivor, which the censor had permitted to go through.

It made several things plain and cast new light on the train of incidents which succeeded the launching of the torpedo. The Tuscania sank very slowly and when she finally did go under she broke in half just before she plunged beneath the waves. There was little excitement on board and one or two sailors who showed a disposition to lose their heads were soon brought under control by the officers. For an hour these calm Americans were about the decks of the slowly perishing Tuscania, behaving very much as if they had passed through such scenes before. Lampe and his immediate companions were the last to get away. The first two boats lowered came down in splinters. The third was coming down nicely when the davits broke. "We were out of luck," writes Lampe simply. But, in luck or out of luck, they kept command of themselves and stood about the deck as if on dress parade, waiting for a more favorable turn of fate. Overhead a few stars twinkled in the sky as if to mock them by their brightness.

Brooklyn Boy One of Last to Leave Ship.

Lampe was one of the twelve last to leave the ship. They slid down ropes and got into another company's boat in which there was room. Then they waited around until the ship sank. They heard cries for help as she went down, but they could do nothing.

The story of that journey over the deep in the open boat, pursued by a submarine which thrust up its black snout first on one quarter and then on the other like a hungry wolf following its prey, of the beating rain which fell upon the men, of the lighter that picked them up and of the dead in the bottom of the boat, was one chapter in the annals of the sea that missed a Conrad or a Russell. Lampe tells it in blunt, undecorative soldier fashion. He leaves many details to the imagination. Perhaps it is but a confused blur in his mind as it is in so many instances when one has been part of one of the great experiences of life. But in his letter he includes this interesting sentence, descriptive of a scene which took place while the Tuscania was settling into her grave. "The destroyers were chasing around for all they were worth, and I understand now they got what they were after."

The letter is dated February 11 and postmarked "Winchester." It begins by telling how Sergeant Tommy Clanton, Sergeant Martin and Corporal Lampe of the 213th Aero Squadron, were sitting on their backs sky-larking. It was 6:15 p.m. The fates had ordained it that Sergeant Tommy and Corporal Fred should not meet again until they were on British soil.

When the Sub's Torpedo Struck.

"We were all three seated on our bunks fooling," writes Lampe, "when something hit our side of the boat (port side) seemed to grind its way in and then explode, putting out all the lights."

"I was nearest the door and grabbed my life preserver, followed by Sergeants Martin and Clanton. We called to the men to take their time—that we had only been mined. That was the last I saw of Tommy until today."

"When I reached the starboard side of the boat, our side, on my way to the lower deck, I found the stairway leading to the next deck crowded, so I walked over to the side to take a look at the water to see if the boat was listing, and I made up my mind to take my time, for, if I didn't make my boat on the top deck and the transport should go down at once, I wouldn't have so far to jump. When the stairs were clear I made my way to the top deck."

"When I reached my boat some of the men were there. We were to take to the fourth or last boat to be lowered."

"The first came down in splinters, also the second, and in lowering the third boat the davits broke, so we knew we were out of luck. We must have stood round for at least an hour or more."

"About that time the last boat of the next company was lowered so I told some of the men to make for it, as there were only about twelve of us left and there was plenty of room. Then the lieutenant and I went down, just as the boat pulled out. One of the men slid down the wrong rope and fell about thirty feet to the boat. I had a bad time with two of the men, who were excited, but managed them by telling them the boat wouldn't sink. In the meantime the steamer was slowly sinking and the crew was signalling with rockets.

Submarine Follows Ship's Boat.

"The destroyers were chasing around for all they were worth and I understand now they got what they were after. When we got into the boat we rowed about 300 yards to see if we couldn't pick up some more if the steamer did go down.

"We had no sooner decided to wait than what should appear on our stern but a submarine. Well, believe me, we sure did row some.

"A destroyer passed us so we signalled to it that we had seen the sub and they told us to put out our lights. The destroyer had not gone a quarter of a mile when the sub came up again on our port side. Well, we just dropped into the bottom of the boat and waited results. When none came we looked over the side and the damn thing had gone.

"About this time the steamer went down. It broke in two and then sank. We heard cries for help but couldn't do a thing, and it sure did make us feel bad.

"I had no hat or coat and was pretty well soaked when we were picked up by a trawler about 12:30, and fell on to a board and slept, even though it was raining.

"We were sunk about (deleted by censor) and arrived there about 5:30 the next morning with plenty of rain and the last ones to be taken in. I was cold and they took us about a mile into town in sightseeing cars, without tops.

"The hotels were opened to us and we were given hot tea and coffee, bread, crackers, cheese and jam, plenty of whiskey, and put to bed.

Tells of Heroism of Captain.

"Three chaps were found dead in the boat when we were picked up. Also, the captain and one of the crew jumped overboard to save two fellows from the trawler. Of 157 in our squadron 144 have been accounted for so far."

Miss Lampe finished the letter, slowly folded it and put it away. Outside, the automobiles were whirring softly to and fro on pleasure bent, and the mellow light from the windows of fine homes shone on scenes of luxury and contentment. President street seemed far removed from the perils of the sea.

The same mail which brought a letter descriptive of the Tuscania sinking from Corporal Fred Lampe also brought letters from other survivors, Lafayette W. Rothsteen Jr., who wrote to his parents at 235 Van Buren street, and Charles H. Crofts, who wrote to his mother, Mrs. Minnie Crofts, 307 Carlton avenue.

Rothsteen's letter is a brief but thrilling one. It is as follows:

Young Rothsteen Tells Experience.

"Winfield Norris and I left our stateroom at about 4:45 p.m. on the afternoon of February 5, went up to the purser's office and paid $2.75 for a cablegram to you folks saying that we had arrived safely. We then went on deck and were standing on the stern. I had just said that in another half hour we would be safe, as it was then quite dark, when there was a thud and then a terrific explosion. We both grabbed hold of a pair of handles on two ventilators aboard the ship and held on for dear life. I was soaked to the skin from water and steam which came over the top of the smokestacks, also the wreckage from several lifeboats which were blown to atoms came down on my head. I thought it was all over for little Lafayette, for it looked as though the two great smokestacks were coming down upon my head, so I just smiled (with rage, I guess), to think that we should be almost over and then get sunk by a "Tin Fish" (a present from the Pigs). After the explosion the lights went out, as the torpedo had hit the boiler room and disabled us. I went up to where our lifeboat was and worked like the devil to get it launched. Finally we got her launched and then they rowed away and left me. I was satisfied, as I figured I'd have more chance on the sinking ship than the lifeboats, as quite a few of the ropes broke and smashed the boats to pieces when they hit the water. I'm lucky I stayed aboard. I then went to the stern of the Tuscania and sat down waiting for the ship to either sink or turn over, and then I was going to dive off and swim for my life. I happened to look along the port side of the steamer and saw that an English torpedo boat destroyer was alongside taking men off. I went up that deck in record time and slid down a rope and was safely aboard her. I no more than got aboard when she pulled away, as the submarine was still around and they were afraid they'd be torpedoed. Well, to make a long story short, we landed safely in Ireland. Imagine, Winfield and I had become separated aboard the Tuscania and we met aboard the T. B. D. Some luck, as there were only four of us from the 213th on board. We've had a wonderful time since then. Brass bands, parades and everything. Now, we're somewhere in England; for how long, I don't know. I wouldn't have missed being aboard the Tuscania for a million dollars. I wasn't scared once.

"When this war is over and Frid is buried for good, I'll be able to tell you stories that very few others could."

Crofts Had Hair-Raising Experience.

The letter of Crofts was the shortest of all but he glosses over a hair-raising experience which makes one wish that a trained observer had been in the boat with him. He writes:

Dear Ma—Could not cable you that I am safe, as I am flat broke, but as I suppose you must have guessed, I was on board the Tuscania when she was torpedoed. Had a pretty tough time of it, as the lifeboat I got into was overturned when they started to lower it and we were all thrown into the water. I struck my head as I fell and got a nasty cut, but the cold of the water revived me and I managed to get to another boat which was passing near me, and was pulled into it. We drifted about for about seven or eight hours and were finally smashed up on the rocks of an island off the coast of Scotland. One man was dashed to death, but the rest of us succeeded in fighting our way in to the shore, where we were found the next morning by a coast guard.

He took us to his shack and fed us and dried our clothes and then took us down to the village where we were taken care of for two days, until the military authorities were notified and moved us.

We were all battered up a bit on the rocks, but are coming around nicely now. I had one finger on my left hand crushed, but would not let the doctor cut it off, and they tell me here at the hospital, where I go every day, that my head and hand will both come around fine.

I hope it is soon, as we sure would like to get a chance to get even with the Huns for what we got.

Fine Time in Ireland, Says Norris.

A letter has also been received by James N. Norris, father of Winfield S. Norris, of 703 Greene avenue. Young Norris was in the 213th Aero Squadron with Lafayette Rothstein, of whom he speaks in the letter. The letter is dated February 11 and reads in part as follows:

"They say four torpedoes were fired at the ship, but only one exploded. Two missed. It was as if the ship hit a rock. Then in a fraction of a second there was a big explosion on the starboard. The lifeboats on the davits on this side were smashed to pieces. There was a shower of smoke, steam, water and wreckage. The ship listed to the right, and it looked as if she were going right down.

"It looked as if we would finish our voyage swimming, but the ship settled and then we went to the boats we were assigned to. And both boats were smashed. The officers decided to launch two rafts, which we did. I and another fellow were the only two left of the men assigned to our boats on deck. We went up forward where a British destroyer came alongside, and I went over the side on a rope aboard it. After we pulled away from the ship, Laf showed up, and he was sure a welcome sight.

"They landed us in Ireland, and they gave us a grand time while we were there. Nothing was too good for us. But it doesn't seem like a foreign country, except the halfpence—and we haven't many of them."

ROOSEVELT LEGION HEADED BY SOLMO

Post Starts With 40 Members —McCloskey Presides at Organization.

Roosevelt, Oct. 2.—With 40 paid up new members, Roosevelt Post, A. L., Long Island's newest Legion unit, was launched, last night, at the organization meeting in headquarters hall of the Roosevelt Fire Department on Centennial ave. Peter Solmo was unanimously elected commander. Harry Le Mar and Thomas Clanton were elected first and second vice commanders, respectively, unopposed.

Joseph McCloskey, of Freeport, a former commander of William Clinton Story Post, and a membership officer of the Legion organization for the Department of New York, presided as a neutral chairman until the new unit was officially organized. Following the election of officers he turned over a new gavel to the commander.

"There are between 10,000 and 13,000 American Legion units in the United States," he commented. "It has proven true that it is the small post that accomplishes the best results in the interest of Legionism, and, starting with 40 paid up members, in my humble opinion, you veterans have gotten off to a good start."

A surprise contest marked the election of a third vice commander, when Kurt Groepier defeated Frank Kiernan by 17 to 15. Other officers elected were: Treasurer, Earl Thoma; adjutant, Allison Stewart, and recording adjutant, Francis Assip. The officers will be formally inducted at a public ceremony at a date to be announced later.

The new unit had the distinction of actual inception on the first day of the American Legion fiscal year, or the time when annual dues start. The veterans will, therefore, get full "money's worth" in the ensuing year, the Legionnaires showed.

4 Seek Leadership Of Roosevelt Legion

Roosevelt, Sept. 18—The Roosevelt Post of the American Legion faces a four-cornered fight for commander tonight at the legion dugout. Thomas Clanton, first vice commander, is the logical successor to the present commander, but Peter Solmo, who was commander last year, is a candidate, as are Wayne Harris and Frank Kiernan.

AGAINST BERRY

Senator Clarke Will Stump
Arkansas for Davis.

COACHING GOVERNOR.

Junior Senator Will Pay the Political Debt He Owes—Instructing Davis as to Course in Levee Appointments.

Little Rock, March 4—Unless reappointed by Gov. Davis, eight members of the St. Francis Levee Board will retire from office during the next few weeks, beginning with Monday. A number of prominent democrats from eastern Arkansas were in Little Rock today interviewing Gov. Davis in behalf of various candidates. A meeting was held at 11 o'clock this morning in the office of the Governor, attended by several prominent men from that section of the state.

United States Senator James P. Clark was also present and addressed the group. ^{Gov. Davis} half of the re- and Frank Barton and other retiring members. Senator Clarke stated that the interest of the St. Francis Levee District demanded the reappointment of those gentlemen and urged upon Gov. Davis the necessity of keeping the levee matters out of factional politics. He said it was his intention to stump eastern Arkansas against the re-election of Senator James H. Berry, and he wanted to be in position to tell the people that Gov. Davis was not using the levees as a political machine.

Other gentlemen present requested the Governor to appoint Clerk A. H. Hammett of Cross county on the board to succeed President Killough. The directors whose terms are about to expire are President O. N. Killough, of Gross, Frank Barton, of Crittenden, E. A. Rolf, of St. Francis, H. F. Role-son, of Lee, W. W. Cate Craigh-head, H. C. Dunavant, of Mississippi, I. T. McDoy, of Phillips and J. E. Clanton, of Poinsett.

The regular session of the legislature will expire Wednesday, and the special session voted for almost unanimously by both branches will extend the session to May 4th.

POINSETT.
J. E. Clanton is the owner of the Mc-
 Comas farm in the St. Francis levee district, for which he paid $10,000; is a successful farmer, and esteemed citizen, holding the confidence and friendship of his neighbors and fellow-citizens.

HON. J. E. CLANTON RESIGNS SEAT

Former Prosecuting Attorney Clyde Going of Harrisburg Is New Member from Poinsett County—Has Already Entered on His Duties.

Little Rock, April 12.—Just after convening this morning, Hon. J. E. Clanton of Poinsett tendered to the Speaker of the House his resignation, as representative from that county. The resignation was filed, and within an hour a messenger from the senate entered with an announcement of the appointment of Hon. Clyde Going of Harrisburg, to succeed Mr. Clanton. Mr. Going was immediately sworn in, and in 15 minutes was taking an important part in the red hot debate on the St. Francis levee bill by Mr. Little.

Mr. Clanton resigned because of numerous business duties that interfere with the service which he believes every representative should give his county. He expressed the hearty appreciation he has felt for the companionship of his colleagues on the floor, and the keen regret at the necessity for his resignation.

The new member, Hon. Clyde Going, has been connected with the official and political life of this section for a number of years, was prosecuting attorney for his district and is well known as one of the able men of Eastern Arkansas.

The Arkansas legislature will come to a close one month from Monday and the session promises to be a busy one. Much of the most important legislation recommended by Gov. Donaghey in his inaugural address is yet to be considered, and it is believed that the next thirty days will accomplish more than has been done in the past three months. This is explained from the fact that all the important measures have been introduced, considered and fought out in the committees and are now on the house and senate calendars awaiting final disposition. The principal bone of contention, and the matter that has retarded legislation more than any thing else has been practically settled when the house Friday evening passed the Patterson state capitol bill.

OBITUARY

Susan Fields Rusk was born in De Kalb County, Missouri, in 1843, and died at Tyronza, Arkansas, March 26, 1923. She was 80 years and 2 months of age at her death. In 1861 she was married to Oliver Davis, and to this union five children were born. Three of these children preceded their mother to the Great Beyond. The two surviving children are Mrs. Julia Rodrick of Galva, and Mrs. Ella Beasley of Tyronza, Arkansas. Fourteen grand children and nine great grand children also survive her.

Her second marriage to Mr. J. K. Rusk took place in 1884. From this union a daughter was born but only lived 6 years. Mr. Rusk died in 1919. Mrs. Rusk united with the Christian Church at the age of 19 and has remained faithful until death. She had been a constant sufferer since last August and had prayed the Lord to release her from her sufferings. Everything was sufferings. Everything was done for her that loving hands and their gentle ministry could do.

The body arrived in McPherson on the 5:30 Rock Island Wednesday afternoon and the funeral service was held immediately afterward at the grave. Rev. Lawrence S. Ashley was the officiating minister.

Cherokee Co. People Have Reunion

A very interesting reunion of former Cherokee county people occurred at Long Beach, Calif., July 4, when 80 or 90 persons sat down to a sumptuous repast in the Auditorium on the Beach Pier.

As a first effort at arranging a meeting of South Eastern Kansans it was certainly a great success and everybody enjoyed greeting the friends of "auld lang syne," and we are still loyal to the Sunflower state although delighted with this garden spot of the world.

While gathered around the table Mr. Finis Commons, a former Lowell Kans., boy took a photograph of the company.

Below is a list of those participating:

From Long Beach: Mr. and Mrs. Davis Meeker, Mrs. Edith Zerby, Mr. C. E. Mitchell and family, Mr. W. F. Stith and family, Mrs. F. G. Mendenhall and family, Mrs. Polly Ann Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Enos J. Morgan, Mr. Roy Harvey and family Mr. Alva Haworth, Mr. Jesse Harvey and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Ferris Harvey, Mr.

Miles Bond and family, Mr. Geo. Starkey and family, Mr. Chas. Alsenz and family, Mr. Hague, Mr. Youmans.

From Pasadena: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hodson, Mr. Caleb Moore and daughter.

From Los Angeles: Wm. Pearson and family, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Losey, E. V. Youmans, Mrs. Sarah Youmans.

From Redlands: Mr. and Mrs. H. Taburn, Mrs. Elizabeth Bond, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Bond.

From Arizonia: Mrs. Libbie Craver Tisdale and son, Frank Rowley.

From San Pedro: Mrs. Marie Estabrook McDonald.

From Santa Ana: H. C. Commons and family, J. R. Commons.

From Lowell, Kans: Miss Edna Newkirk.

From Orange: E. J. Leggett, Miss Blanche Leggett.

An organization of a Cherokee Co. Kans. Association was perfected with Enos J. Morgan of Long Beach as president, and Mrs. Laura Pearson of Los Angeles, secretary. Future meetings will be arranged, at which we hope to meet other friends who were prevented by circumstances from being present the 4th.

Greetings to Cherokee Co. from the Association of Southern California.
