EIGHT AWAIT WORD IN VAIN FROM F. P. MARTIN.

At the home of Frank P. Martin, No. 161 West 231st Street, a family of eight are waiting for news. Martin was thirty years old and a member of the 213th Aero Squadron. Of his six brothers two are in the service—William C. Martin as a Corporal at Camp Upton and Raymond Martin as a pay clerk in the navy.

Martin gave up a contracting partnership with his father to enlist on Dec. 12. His father, M. J. Martin, said to-day he had been eager to join ever since war was declared, but the family had restrained him on the pretext of business and domestic reasons until they saw his determination was unbroken, when they relented.

The last the family heard from Martin was three weeks ago, when he was home on a short furlough from the Mineola flying field. He said at that time that he expected to start for France in a short time. While in training Martin told his family he was delighted with the work.

New York Times

Feb. 9, 1918

At the home of Frank P. Martin, at 161 West 231st Street, his father, M. J. Martin, who is in the contracting business, said his son joined the 213th Aero Squadron, and that there are two other sons in the service, Raymond, 23, a pay clerk in the navy, and William E., a Corporal at Camp Upton. Mr. Martin said his son was home on a short furlough about three weeks ago, when he said he expected to go abroad soon.
